Henderson Urges Ban On Increase In Milk Price

Request to Wickard Disclosed as Hearing On D. C. Winds Up In Passing of Lie

To Set Car Prices

REFUSAL BY CHRYSLER CORPORATION, to withdraw price advances on its cars has forced the OPACS "to take the pricing of automobiles out of the hands of the industry," Leon Henderson said.

Briefs Ordered

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Leon Henderson, Federal price administrator, yesterday revealed he has formally requested Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard to deny Washington milk producers the penny-a-quart increase they are seeking.

Disclosure of his adverse opinion coincided with the closing yesterday of a three-day public hearing on the proposed price boost, and other suggested amendments to the local Federal milk marketing order.

The fact-gathering inquiry, conducted by the Department of Agriculture, wound up with two witnesses hurling the lie at each other and having to be restrained from coming to blows.

Meantime, the Surplus Marketing administration, the Agriculture unit which administers surplus milk programs for the needy, continued to study pleas for extension of nickel quarts on a more equitable basis and establishment of a cent-a-glass project in Washington schools situated in low-income areas.

Applies to Other Cities

Dated June 12, but not made public until yesterday, Henderson's letter expressed hope that Secretary Wickard will reject the proposed increase of 8 cents per hundredweight, "unless it is imperative in order to maintain supplies."

The price administrator advised such action not only on the application of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, but also with respect to proposed increases in other cities having Federal marketing agreements.

In these cities, Washington included, the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to fix prices which distributors shall pay to their milk producerrs. The Capital, however, has no retail price-fixing law or regulations.

"We realize that dairymen havve been contending with rising costs for feed, labor and herd replacements," Henderson wrote Wickard. "However, the drought seems to have been rather fully relievd.

"Farm wage rates do not appear to have advanced enough to affect the total cost of milk production more than 2 to 4 per cent. The rise in the cost of herd replacements is partly offset by higher returns from the sale of discarded cows."

Profit Possibilities Cited

He suggested that local dairy farmers may share in "the general rise in income" by selling a larger proportion of their milk in fluid—the highest priced—form, through rising prices being obtained for surplus milk converted into manufactured products and by the increasing business volume resulting from the rising population.

Last Friday Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana wrote Henderson at length

Fiend Strikes Again

Three colored men were being questioned by police in connection with the rape of one Washington woman and the thwarted assault of another as detectives raided beer parlors and poolrooms in the Tenth, Thirteenth and Second Precincts last night for suspects.

One of the men is said to resemble the gunman who robbed and criminally assaulted Mrs. Vada (Kitty) Abarca, a clerk, in an uptown cleaning establishment Tuesday. The identification was made by a man who saw a colored man leave the store soon after the assault took place.

The woman who escaped a possible similar fate was Miss Katherine Harper, 30, employed in a laundry branch at 1845 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

A colored man held her up at pistol point and took $44 from the till. He was frightened away when he broke a plate glass pane while attempting to lock the door after ordering Miss Harper to a rear room.

Police also are searching for a man who molested a pretty 18-year-old clerk in a laundry branch at 1755

'No Whitewash'

The Commissioners late yesterday named a three-man board to conduct an "administrative study and investigation" of the Metropolitan Police Department.

It was announced, however, that the inquiry would be "long range" and the new committee would first "listen in" at hearings scheduled tomorrow when the special committee of Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, begins its hearings.

Named to the municipal investigation group were Maj. Beverly C. Snow, Assistant Engineer Commissioner; Walter L. Fowler, District budget officer, and Maj. James R. Lusby, disbursing officer.

The Commissioners abandoned earlier plans to have several ranking officials of the Police Department as members of the inquiry board.

It was reported that the local investigation would be confined principally to an inspection of police equipment, facilities and efficiency.

The Commissioners said also the new inquiry board had been instructed to determine whether the Police Department has an adequate training program—with particular

It is the duty of both employers and labor unions not to discriminate, the President stated. The executive order pointed out that all new defense contracts will contain

Army's Records Indicate Sharp Decline in Syphilis

A sharp drop in prevalence of syphilis among the first 1,000,000 Army selectees and volunteers, compared with the year 1917, was reported by the United States Public Health Service yesterday.

Only 1,500 cases exhibiting clinical symptoms of the disease were discovered, or one-seventh of the rate when men were mustered in for the World War, Dr. R. A. Vonderlehr revealed at a press conference.

Of the first 1,000,000 selectees and volunteers, examined between November, 1940, and last April, 63,000 had syphilis or gonorrhea or both, said Dr. Vonderlehr, assistant surgeon general in charge of the venereal disease division. Only 1,500 bore clinical, or visible, evidence of syphilis, however.

The figures by State s showed highest prevalence in the South, lowest in the North and Northeast.

New Potomac Crossing Held U. S. Expense

Rep. Smith Offers Bill to Name Board To Report on Project

A general understanding that any new crossing of the Potomac River should be paid for by the Federal Government as a defense project was revealed last night after Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, yesterday introduced a bill to name a commission to report to Congress on the proposal within six months

Authorized under the bill to spend $25,000 for preparation of studies and plans, the commission also would be charged with making suggestions for financing the undertaking

The bill was drawn up in conference with representatives of the planning commission, District officials and Representative Smith, at which it was agreed that whatever crossing is decided upon—either bridge or tunnel—should be paid for by the United States.

The cost of providing approaches to the structure should be paid by the District and Virginia, it was agreed.

The commission would be responsible also for desginating the type of crossing and deciding whether more than one is desirable or feasible. These officials or their representatives would be named to the board by the Smith bill: The Governor of Virginia, the Alexandria City manager, the Arlington County manager, District Commissioners and a member of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Several weeks ago the House Building and Grounds Committee conducted public hearings on a bridge-tunnel, bill introduced previously by Smith. The measure suggested that the structure connect Fourteenth Street and Main Avenue Southwest with No. 1 Highway. The new bill, which does not designate a location, replaces the earlier measure.

Neutrality Act To Be Ignored In Aiding Russia, Roosevelt Says

LOAN ADMINISTRATOR Jones announced he was considering a loan to Great Britain to avoid forced sale of her investments and securities here.

Ships Are Problem

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

In another unsolicited move to aid Russia, President Roosevelt disclosed yesterday he does not intend to invoke the Neutrality Act in the Russian-German conflict, thereby permitting American vessels to carry war munitions across the Pacific to the Soviet Siberian, port of Vladivostok.

In spite of this third gesture of support for the Soviet forces, no official communication had been received here yesterday from Moscow since Adolf Hitler and Josef Stalin joined battle.

Aid Pledge Unanswered

The State Department has not received any response from Russia to the President's pledge of all possible aid Tuesday or to the statement of general American support for the Russian cause issued Monday. Soviet Ambassador Constantine A. Oumansky has not requested an appointment.

The practical effect so far of the President's pledge of aid and of the exemption from the Neutrality Act granted to Russia is nil.

What effect these moves may have in the future, officials said yesterday, depends on what supplies the Russians may ask for and also depends on how much can be spared from the already overtaxed production schedules of American industry.

A first item of aid projected for Russia is shipping. No American ships were chartered to Russia in the three months preceding the sudden divorce Sunday of the Russian-German partnership. During this period the United States was suspicious of Russian policy. In the year preceding that period, some ten United States vessels were chartered to Russia.

Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, who disclosed the President's decision not to invoke the Neutrality Act, said yesterday that it is too early to discuss the question of ships for Russia, especially in view of the fact that the Russians have not submitted a list of their needs.

Congress Could Overrule

The President's decision put the Russian-German struggle in the same undeclared category as the Sino-Japanese conflict.

It was the first time that the Neutrality Act had not been invoked in a declared war, although it was not used to cover the undeclared Far Eastern conflict or the Finnish-Russian war of 1939-40.

In announcing the President's decision, Welles cited Section 1 of the Neutrality Act, which provides that the President shall issue a neutrality proclamation whenever he or Congress find that "there exists a state

Red Tanks, Panzers Struggle In Day-Long Titanic Battle

Copyright by New York Times

Bern, June 25.—The second epic clash of hundreds of armed vehicles in this war and one which, according to reports received here, far surpasses the horrors, noise and pounding of the Franco-German clash at Rethel last May, has been in progress for more than 24 hours.

The reports say the battle is raging along the semicircular line stretching roughly from the Niemen River, where it crosses the East Prussian frontier to a point just south of Kaunas, then southeast to Novitroki (at the junction of the Kaunas-Varena road) thence southwest by south to Grodno.

Losses on both sides have been "tremendous" as reinforcements of new material rush in to replace those tanks and armored cars either knocked out of the battle or rushing back for supplies. Over the whole scene both sides' artillery is throwing ton after ton of high explosives in an effort to gain the advantage. According to the reports, the scene resembles that of the classic encounter of the irresistible force and the immovable object.

At a late hour the Germans were reported to have made "slight progress' 'at several points along this front, and show no sign of weakening their drive, while the Russians seem to be manifesting an inclination to fall back to fixed fortified positions built during the last year north of Kaunas.

From Grodno to Brest-Litovsk brief but fierce fighting occurred along the line stretching approximately southeast of the former town, passing east of Robryn and then veering sharply westward to join the former demarcation line at Dormoschewa. The situation in this salient is extremely confused, however, owing to the liberal use both sides are making of parachute troops, air-borne light tanks and artillery.

Along the southern end of the demarcation line a thrust made by

By the Associated Press

A Soviet-style blitzkrieg met and bested the original Nazi model on sections of the long European war front yesterday hurling back the German invaders of the U. S. S. R. or stopping them dead in their tracks with fearful losses, the Red army reported today.

Notable feats of Red arms were listed as the recapture of Przemysl in the Russian part of former Poland, the cutting off of German tanks in the vicinity of Wilno in former Lithuania, and the repulse of repeated German-Rumanian attempts to cross the Prut River into Bucovina and Bessarabia, provinces that Russia

Differing sharply with the German claims of Nazi successes so great as to "baffle the world's imagination," the Red army claimed that only in the Wilno area had German tanks pushed through the Russian front, and that these were immediately segregated from their following infantry by a stubborn Russian stand.

Farther south in Poland, in the low and brody areas, the communique said the German efforts to break through cost them heavy losses in mechanized equipment.

Meanwhile the Russian-German battle line, already shuddering with the shock of armed collision from the Black Sea to the Baltic, was extended to the Arctic seas when reluctant Finland joined the struggle against her old Red foe after four days of precarious neutrality.

The Finns, battered day and night by Russian bombing planes which admittedly made shambles of many cities, heard their Premier Kukka Rangell announces to a grim parliament that Finland had at last begun to defend herself with every atom of power she possesses.

Finns Report Downing 23 Soviet Planes

Although he mentioned only defense, it was clear that there was scarcely a shade of difference between this and a full state of war. He did not disclose the defensive steps taken, but his announcement showed that the lineup of Russia's active enemies had been nearly doubled, to a length of almost 2,000 miles. The Finns stated officially that at least 23 Russian raiders had been shot down, up to 6 p. m. Wednesday, but still they came through the twilight of the Northern Light.

On the German and Rumanian-manned front which the Nazis opened up last Sunday at dawn, the Germans said the drive was spear-headed by hard-hitting dive bombers which smashed Soviet troop and munitions trains.

Sweden agreed to permit the Nazis to send a force "not exceeding one division" across her territory from Norway into Finland—although "firmly" resolving to go on trying to stay out of the fighting herself.

A demand for such passage, it was stated in Stockholm, was made by both the Finns and Nazis.

The Russians—thus menaced by subsidiary forces from the north as well as those of Rumania in the south, aside from the main thrust by millions of Germans in the center—announced that Turkey at least had promised to stay neutral.

The Germans promised to give today the details of what they called their incredible victories. They held back all particulars, but one Nazi source expressed a belief that the Soviet high command already was cut off from some of its armies and that this process of isolation was being accelerated.

Nazis Claim Rule of Air in Battle Area

The Nazis reported that half a dozen long Soviet military trains were smashed by dive bombers and that an unstated number of Soviet tanks were similarly destroyed.

Moreover, it was claimed in Berlin that the Nazi air fleet had gained complete control of the battle area—a claim sharply disputed by the Russians, who announced that they had heavily raided Warsaw in Poland, Constanta in Rumania, Danzig and East Phussia and, in three days had destroyed 381 German planes against the loss of 374 Russian craft.

In the absence of specific information, it appeared that while the Nazis were generally advancing, they had not yet gone beyond the outer fringe of the Soviet—that is, the recently seized Baltic lands of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, and th Russian part of dismembered Poland.

With htis estimate of the situation, military information in Vichy, France, agreed generally.

In Vichy, it was generally understood that seven German attacks during the day had been halted or slowed down by bitter Russian resistance. The Soviet was represented as still fighting a slow delaying action.

This was the picture as seen in Vichy:

On the northern flank the Germans were pressing a three-columned attack, and likewise on the southern flank. In the north they aimed at Siaulial in the center of Lithuania, at Kaunas, that country's capital and at Grodno, in old Poland. Against Siaulial they advanced slowly. Against Kaunas, the thrust was virtually stopped. Against Grodno it was stalled.

The thrust at the center was halted east of Brest Litovsk.

On the south, in Poland, the German march had stalled short of Wlodzimierz: toward Brody it was moving slowly; against Rawa Ruska it was stalled.

The Italian wireless, attributing its information to "reports from Helsinki," asserted the Germans had in fact knifed clean through Lithuania and Latvia to enter Russia proper, but there was no confirmation of this broadcast elsewhere.

Hope Renewed For Shipyard Strike Truce

Union Secretary Flies To Coast, Machinists May Let Him Deal

The Labor Front

MEDIATION BOARD calls entire union membership of 42 here in effort to settle dispute at Duquesne Light Co.'s Colfax plant, near Pittsburgh.

Hillman Acts

Quick settlement of the seven-week San Francisco machinists' strike, following a conference scheduled for last night with E. C. Davison, A. F. of L. machinists' union secretary, was forecast as probable yesterday by informed labor sources here.

Davison, it was reported, left Washington by plane early yesterday at the request of OPM labor chief Sidney Hillman, after local union officials had indicated he could be of help. The San Francisco unionists, outraged at what they consider "strike breaking" tactics of their national president, H. W. Brown, were said to be amenable to discussing a settlement with Davison.

The strike, which has hampered work since May 10 on $500,000,000 of Navy shipbuilding in 11 bay shipyards, involves about 1,800 machinists, divided between A. F. of L. and C. I. O. locals.

The basis for settlement, it was indicated, may be an agreement with the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, largest of the concerns involved, to sign a closed shop agreement with the A. F. of L. machinists, and the arrangement of an arbitration and grievance procedure in shops with C. I. O. machinists.

The closed shop condition, it was learned, has been indicated as acceptable by Bethlehem, which recently followed a Mediation Board recommendation and indicated its

That amendment cut $2,862,545 from a $4,500,000 item for the restoration of the Commodity Credit Corporation's capital.

Biggest expenditure in the bill is $72,462,860 for the Navy, while the committee declared that 97 per cent of the money provided will go for activities directly or indirectly concerned with national defense or the

Nazis Reported Asking British To Fight Soviet

Ankara, June 24 (U.P.)—Franz Von Papen, German ambassador to Turkey, approached British Ambassador Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, through the Turkish government, with an offer of peace if Britain would join an anti-Bolshevist coalition, neutral diplomatic sources said tonight.

The British ambassador was said to have replied to the peace offer by referring Von Papen to Prime Minister Winston Churchill's speech Sunday, welcoming Russia to the ranks of Hitler foes.

Leaders Expect D. C. to Meet Budget Without Tax Increase

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

District revenues for 1942 are expected to be ample, House leaders said last night, to cover the $54,000,000 appropriation bill the Senate is scheduled to debate Saturday, two legislative days away from expiration of the fiscal year.

The full Senate Appropriations Committee is expected to report to the Senate today a measure $1,500,000 in excess of the bill passed by the House last week, and the attitude of leaders foreshadowed acceptance of the measure without increasing taxes or the Federal payment.

In the House, where sentiment for higher District taxes has been strongest and where any move to raise the Federal payment without increasing levies is certain to be blocked, leaders indicated relatively clear sailing for the record supply bill.

Because of the absence of many Senators whoare attending the funeral of Senator Pat Harrison, the Senate will transact virtually no business today. As a number of measures are on its calendar ahead ofthe District bill, that measure is not expected to be reached before Saturday.

Because of the difficulties of getting Senateaction and House agree-

Counter-Attack Cuts Off Nazi Tank Units, Reds Claim

Action Traps Break-Through Units in North

By the Associated Press

Moscow, (Thursday), June 26.—Counterattacking Red army troops cut off German tank columns that had succeeded yesterday in breaking through Soviet lines toward Wilno, in old Lithuania, and Brody, in the southeastern former Poland.

"The enemy's mechanized formations sustained heavy losses" in these attacks on the northern and central parts of the Baltic-Black Sea front, the communique said.

"In the Bessarabian sector of the front, Red army troops firmly hold their position on the eastern bank of the Prut River, successfully repulsing numerous enemy attemps to force the river.

"In the area of Skuleni the enemy attempted to advance, but suffered heavy defeat and his remnants are being pressed beyond the Prut River."

66 Planes Downed

"Seventy - six enemy airplanes were brought down in airi combats and by antiaircraft artillery fire, and 17 of our planes failed to return to their bases. . . .

"Our air force dealt a number of devastating blows on German airdromes in Finland, bombed Memel (East Prussia) and patrol boats in Constanta (Rumanian Black Sea port)."

The communique added:

"A German flier, taken prisoner on the Soviet-Finnish frontier after his plane was brought down by our air force, said, we do not want to fight the Russians and are doing it under compulsion. We are tired of war and do not know what we are fighting for. . . .

"On the first day of fighting, young Soviet anti-aircraft gunners of a unit showed little confidence in firing at enemy planes. The next day, however, they acted calmly, sustained well-aimed fire and brought down nine German bombers during the day.

"In air combats our fliers of an aviation unit brought down 10 enemy aircraft. A regiment commander, hero of the Soviet Union, Major Korobkov, brought down two enemy bombers. Radio Operator and Machine Gunner Shishkovich, during the execution of an assignment, brought down two enemy Messerschmitts.

"Commander Sorokin, during the execution of a fighting assignment with nine airplanes, was attacked by 15 enemy aircraft, brought down six airplanes and lost four.

Heroic Acts Cited

"Major Yachmenev was wounded in both legs but refused to go to the hospital and continued fighting.

"Fliers of an aviation unit in the Stanislav area brought down 19 enemy aircraft two airplanes being brought down by anti-aircraft guns under commande of junior commanders Vovalev and Milakhov.

"Four German fliers were taken prisoners by these crews. In all they took prisoners 12 German fliers.

"Heroism was displayed by fliers of an aviation unit who destroyed 13 enemy aircraft, losing only one.

"A Red army man of an infantry regiment in Romanov stealthily approached an enemy scout motorcyclist and killed him.

"A commander of a subdivision of the same regiment, Junior Lieut. Mezuev, thrice wounded, did not leave the field and continued fighting. A car driver of a building battalion of a formation detained four German fliers who jumped from a damaged airplane and attempted to escape.

Sweden Gives Nazis Transit To Finland

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, June 25.—The Swedish government announced tonight that it had agreed to permit the passage of a German force of not more than one division across its territory from Norway to Finland.

The Germans will travel by the Swedish railways. The government said its action was taken after consulting parliament.

A communique said, however, that "Sweden will firmly pursue her efforts to maintain her liberty and independence and to stay outside warlike conflicts."

The following communique was issued after a secret meeting of the Riksdag (parliament):

"In the situation which has arisen through war breaking out between Germany and the U. S. S. R., Sweden will firmly pursue her efforts to maintain her liberty and independence and to stay outside warlike conflicts.

"The new situation has, however, confronted us with certain specific questions. Thus both from the Finnish and the German side a demand has been made for permission to transport a force not exceeding one division on Swedish railways from Norway to Finland. The government, after consulting the Riksdag has agreed to this taking place in a form compatible with Swedish sovereignty."

Spokesmen of the foreign office, when asked about other questions, said there was no discussion of any but practical questions.

Stukas Smash Troop Trains On Balkan Front, Berlin Says

Panzers Slice East to Encircle 'Great Masses' of Foe; Finns Reported in War

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Thursday), June 26.—Swarms of Stuka dive-bombers were reported today to have smashed Soviet troop and munition trains moving up to the Balkan front as Nazi tanks sliced eastward in their attempts to encircle great masses of Red army soldiers.

Successes "baffling the imagination" was claimed by Germany, and one informed quarter expressed belief the Red high command already had been cut off from contact with some of its armies in the vast battle surging from the Baltic to the Black Sea.

The official news agency DNB reported that a German squadron attacked six long freight trains loaded with war materials and troops in an unnamed southeastern Russian town.

Freight cars were bombed off the buckled rails, hundreds of Red soldiers scrambled from the overturned cars and then were sprayed by German machine-gun fire.

Depot Made Shambles

The depot became a shambles and resulting fires spread to nearby gasoline stations serving them; grounded irplanes were destroyed, Red fighter planes patrolling over Soviet bases deep behind the front were shot down by Luftwaffe pilots whose work "was a picture of most extensive destruction."

German sources said Finland had declared war on Russia and had entered into heavy action in the North.

(The Finnish legation in London announced that repeated Russian territorial violations amounted to open hostilities against Finland and thus Finland was compelled "from now on to defend herself with every means in her power.").

The vast German army was declared plunging eastward through a blazing heat wave to almost incredible victories, while its Finnish and Rumanian allies were smashing at the Soviet flanks upon the greatest battlefront ever known.

These achievements of Nazi arms, said a military spokesman, would be reported in detail later today.

Sweeping Victories Claimed

The outlines of the German success were thus suggested:

1. Tactical surprises has succeeded as planned.
2. The German air fleet already had achieved complete supremacy.
3. Soviet troops, although offering heavy resistance, had nowhere been able to hold the German offensive.
4. All German operations were going forward on schedule.

The active participation of Rumania and Finland—together with the fact that Hungary had severed relations with Russia and Slovakia had gone to war against her—was declared to foreshadow the early erection of a complete eastern front against Bolshevism.

As to the Ukraine Baltic states—Lithuania, Estonia, Latvia—it was said they had accepted communism unwillingly and were happy to throw it off.

Press reports from the front have indicated, however, that at least three giant columns are being driven into the Soviet—one out of East Prussia into the Baltic states; another south of Warsaw in old Poland into the center of the Red line; the third out of Rumania into Bessarabia.

"Surprise for England"

Unquestionably, other German armies are describing, with their steel panzer tips, other angles in the German strategy of surprise and unorthodox isolation of enemy units.

The brevity of the German communiques was explained on the ground that it would be foolhardy for the German military to give any detailed information which might indicate Nazi campaign plans to the Russian command.

A spokesman declared enthusiastically:

"England will be fooled about Russia holding up in the east just as she was fooled in the belief that France would hold up in the west."

He declared the Finns had been active from the beginning, but did not elaborate beyond saying that Leningrad, the second Russian city, is not far from the Finnish border. In reaching Leningrad, Finnish troops would have to fight through the now reversed defenses of the Karelian isthmus which they held so stubbornly in the war with Russia in the winter of 1939-40.

That the Germans are following the strategy of the French and Balkan campaigns by sending armored columns deep into enemy territory and far ahead of supporting troops, was indicated in the spokesman's statement that the Nazis have advanced "surprisingly far in some places."

Naval Victories Claimed

Not only on danld and in the air, but also at sea the German forces would have successes to report, he saiad, adding:

"The navy has been very successful and will reveal surprises tomorrow. Speed boats have shown their full value."

Russian planes have been shot down in great numbers, it was said, and there also would be a great surprise at the small German losses.

D. N. B., the official news agency, reported, for example, that a single German air fleet yesterday destroyed 108 Russian planes, and it also told of the destruction of 280 Russian tanks yesterday in two sectors.

The Soviet air force, said one informant, heavily bombarded Constanta, Sulina and Galati in Rumania "without achieving the desired result." In Rumanian operations, the Red airmen were declared to have lost 30 planes in the air and 40 more on the ground to the loss of only 12 Rumanian planes.

Front reporters sent back dispatches that the Russians were defending themselves stubbornly at some points but offering little resistance in other sectors of the Baltic-to-Black Sea front.

One told how German troops driving into Lithuania from East Prussia advanced 30 miles in one day, "panting, soiled, thirsty and exhausted from the growing heat."

"In the Lithuanian villages," this dispatch said, "the advancing soldiers were regarded with curiosity.

Other correspondents told how small Russian Asiatics sat at their machine guns to the last.

protesting against any increase to the Maryland-Virginia producers.

Concluding the marketing hearing yesterday, Haskell Donoho, presiding officer, announced that briefs of arguments supplementing factual testimony by witnesses must be submitted by July 7.

Greatest excitement of the three-day inquiry came midway in the morning session while Coleman Gore, production manager of Embassy-Fairfax Dairy, was on the witness stand.

Lie Is Passed

Gore told of a conversation between himself and a dissatisfied member of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association in which he (Gore) advised the farmer that the association will give members anything they want, if they stand firm.

"That's a damned lie," shouted bespectacled, white-haired Bruce B. Derrick, the association's secretary-treasurer, as he rose from his chair, about 12 feet from Gore.

"Don't call me a liar!" cried the Embassy-Fairfax official, leaping up, hoisting the heavy chair in which he had been seated and advancing toward Derrick. The latter had about a 50-pound advantage, plus several inches in height.

While Donoho ran around the hearing table and grabbed Derrick, Gore was restrained by his counsel, Sefton Darr. Derrick spat on his hands and, on a slippery floor in the U. S. Chamber of Commerce building, Gore managed to slip over to within a few inches of his accuser despite Darr's efforts.

Donoho called a brief recess, apologies were exchahged and the hearing resumed. At the lunch recess Derrick and Gore shook hands and smiled.

The remainder of the final day was devoted mainly to discussion of amendmentsc to the Federal marketing order proposed by Derrick and Charles I. Dunn, administrator of the order. They were largely of a technical nature, involving butterfat content, price differentials, etc.

A new amendment offered yesterday by Derrick would require distributors to put up a bond guaranteering payment to producers, in case their buyers went into bankruptcy. He withdrew a proposed amendment which would have included parts of Northern Virginia in the Washington marketing area.

Nazi Drives to East

SWEDES PERMIT NAZI TROOP PASSAGE—Sweden announced last night it had agreed to permit passage of a German force of not more than one division across its borders from Norway to Finland (1). The latter country was pounded by Soviet bombs yesterday and was reported to have joined the Germans in the war against Russia. German reports indicated that three giant Nazi thrusts are stabbing into Russian territory—out of East Prussia in the Baltic States (2); from Poland into the Red center (3), and out of Rumania into Bessarabia (4). Reports from Berne, Switzerland, indicated that an epic clash of armed vehicles, surpassing the Franco-German battle of tanks at Rethel last May, had been in progress more than 24 hours along a semicircular line (2) from the East Prussian frontier to a point south of Kaunas, thence southwest by south to Grodno

U. S. to Set Ceiling On New Car Prices

Henderson's Hand Forced by Chrysler; Success Depends on Public Support

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Refusal of the Chrysler Corporation to rescind recent price advances on its 1941 models has forced the Division of Price Stbailization "to take the pricing of automobiles out of the hands of the industry," and to prepare maximum price ceilings for next year's cars, Leon Henderson announced last night.

In an angry public statement, the Federal Price Administrator declared that the Chrysler Corporation was the first major industrial concern to refuse to cooperate in maintaining stable prices, and that its action, if followed by other companies, "would undermine the whole structure of price stability." To date, Henderson added, the voluntary cooperation of private industry has been the factor which has enabled the prevention of inflation.

On June 12, Henderson telegraphed the huge auto concern, along with the Ford Motor Co. and three "independent" manufacturers, immediately to withdraw recently announced price advances on this year's new cars. The advance, in the case of Chrysler, ranged from $15 to $53.

No action was taken on the request. Henderson called a meeting with representatives of Chrysler at which the company offered to make only a "small concession as a 'gesture' of cooperation," the statement declared.

As a result of Chrysler's stand, Henderson said he was releasing the smaller independents—Nash-Kelvinator Corporation, Studebaker Corporation, and Hudson Motor Car Co.—from his request to rescind their price increases. He implied, however, that he expected his demand to the Ford Co., which "is still pending," to be heeded.

He also noted that the Packard Co., which at his request had deferred a price increase for several weeks, was making an advance to bring its price in line with those of the other independents. Henderson complimented the company, however, for its cooperation in delaying the proposed increase at the OPM's request.

G. M. C. May Cooperate

Speculation last night centered on the probable action of the Ford Co. and General Motors Corporation, the other member of the "big three" of the auto industry. It was believed that in view of Henderson's announcement of impending price ceilings, and the absence of any announcement to date that General Motors contemplated price advances, the company would not raise its prices during the rest of the 1941 model year.

The new price schedules, which will go into effect on August 1, at the beginning of the 1942 model period, will be "complete" and "overall," Henderson warned. They will include not only manufacturers' prices, but also dealers' mark-up, and probably trade-in values as well.

The OPA administrator also indicated that for the first time he was about to avail himself of one of his strongest enforcement weapons by reporting "the full facts of the Chrysler situation to the President and to the Congress." This step, which Henderson said will be taken "at the proper time," has been considered one of the most potent methods of marshaling public opinion behind his price orders.

Public Support Essential

Public support, in turn, is deemed an essential factor in effecting compliance with the orders, still primarily dependent for enforcement on voluntary cooperation.

In what was seen as an indictment of the Chrysler Corporation, on the grounds of profiteering, Henderson declared that the price increase which the company was asked to give up involved about $4,000,000 out of net sales of more than $750,000,000.

"In terms of net income to stockholders," the OPA statement explained, "this means that the company was asked to forego one and one-half million dollars at a time when it had already earned, after taxes, about 20 million dollars for the first six months of this year. In 1940 Chrysler earned more than 37 million dollars, or 23 per cent on its invested capital."

Henderson added, "The action of this company which is just finishing a year of near record volume and favorable earnings, if followed by other companies, would undermine the whole structure of price stability. It is the policy of this office to ask companies which are enjoying a good volume of business and profit either directly or indirectly arising from defense expenditure, to absorb cost increases in a reasonable degree.

"In striking contrast with the attitude of other corporations, Chrysler has refused to do this. Had a similar attitude prevailed in other industries, the wholesale price level and the cost of living would now be out of control. In other words, voluntary cooperation on the part of private industry has so far enabled us to avoid inflation. The action of the Chrysler Corporation endangers this method, which can not be used in an industry where a major unit, already operating profitably, refused to lend its support to measures of voluntary cooperation."

May Determine Powers

The refusal of the company to cooperate in maintaining an OPA-designated price level may result in forcing the issue of Henderson's price fixing powers, and of stimulating enactment of price fixing legislation, it was believed.

To date, Henderson, has not requested such legislation, although proposals for an act which OPA deems desirable have been prepared.

Only last week, Henderson admitted to the House Appropriations Committee that there is "quite a bit of chiseling going on." He added that the "honeymoon with business' on voluntary price control is almost ended, and said he would ask for a "big stick" for use against recalcitrant firms.

In other price action yesterday, Henderson announced a schedule of maximum prices which may be charged for pig iron, major raw material in steel production, and requested railroad car wheel builders to withdraw "a substantial price increase" they had proposed to put into effect on July 1.

Setting schedules of maximum prices on pig iron is the third major step OPA has taken in the steel industry. Previously ceilings had been established for iron and steel scrap and for iron and steel products.

Finland Will Fight in Self Defense

By the Associated Press

Helsinki (Thursday), June 26.—Beset devastatingly by Russian bombers all day and night Wednesday, Finland announced early today her determination to defend herself with all her power against this latest "aggression" by an old enemy.

The defense already is under way, Premier Jukha Rangell told parliament during a secret night session, called while Soviet bombs rained down on his country. He got a unanimous vote of confidence.

(Authoritative sources in Berlin said Finland had decided to go formally to war against Russia, but the announcement of Premier Rangell referred only to defense against aggression.)

This capital city had six air raid alarms in little more than 24 hours, the sixth sounding early today.

The Russian warplanes ranged far and wide over this country, which they laid waste during the brief war of 1939-40.

The Enzogitzeit wood and cellulose factory, at Notka, one of the largest in the north, was heavily raided, with damage estimated at 45,000,000 markka (roughtly, $1,000,000).

It was officially stated that 23 Russian planes had been shot down in Finland by 6 p. m. Wednesday, 21 of them by Finland's air force and 2 by antiaircraft.

During the day the Russians turned the naval guns of Honga Peninsula on adjacent Finnish territory, bombarding it periodically until after 3 p. m.

The area around Hango, the base which the Russians wrung from Finland in the peace settlement of March, 1940, was the scene of violent air raids all day. Russian planes also raided nearby islands.

Incendiary bombs set fire to the hospital at Lovilsa. Another hospital was damaged at Turku, where a whole block of houses was destroyed and numbers of persons suffered injuries. The towns of Orvoo, Forsby and Pyterlahti also were bombed.

The official list of dead thus far stood at 12 for Turku, eight in Heinalo, three in Joensuu and one in Helsinki, but the toll was said to be much higher, as many points had not yet been able to report. Property damage was terrific.

Finns said the Russians used terroristic tactics, citing destruction of two blocks of buildings and the library at Heinola, a sleepy summer resort town of a couple of thousand population. They said the Soviet planes swooped low after dropping bombs and machine-gunned fleeing civilians.

The devastation was great. The city of Lappeenranta, for example, was set aflame and many civilians were killed.

A Finnish government spokesman denounced as "a deliberate lie" the Russian accusations that Nazi troops had assaulted the Soviet Union through northern Finland. The government lodged a strong second protest against what was termed Russia's "unprovoked attack."

Turkish Ship With Navy Elite Sunk by Sub

By the Associated Press

New York, June 25.—The Turkish steamer Rifa carrying officers and men described as the "cream of the Turkish navy and mercantile marine" was torpedoed and sunk by an unidentified submarine tonight, Martin Agronsky, N. B. C. reporter, said in a broadcast from Ankara.

He reported 173 of the 201 passengers on the ship were lost.

Agronsky said 100 Turkish naval officers and men aboard the Rifa were en route to England "to sail back to Turkey two destroyers and six submarines."

Survivors said the torpedo broke the ship in two and that only one lifeboat could be launched and in this 28 passengers were saved, the commentator reported.

The Turkish government had made arrangements with both Germany and Italy to insure safe passage of the vessel, he added.

"The Rifa was bound for Egypt with 100 Turkish naval officers and men described here as the cream of the Turkish navy and mercantile marine," Agronsky said. "They were en route for England to sail back to Turkey two destroyers and six submarines.

"The incident aroused considerable popular feeling here as the Turkish ship carried an illuminated Turkish flag on her stern and an illuminated flag on both her sides."

(Lloyd's registry of shipping does not list the Rifa.)

The President's Day

By International News Service

FIRECRACKERS: Beginning with his dictation of a statement calling on the people to realize as never before the full import of Independence Day in this year of much lost independence abroad, the President's day was charged with significance and international fireworks. Prime purpose of July 4 statement was to publicize a Nation-wide celebration next week under directorship of Mayor LaGuardia and Office of Civil Defense — White House spokesmen "couldn't say" whether Mr. Roosevelt would keynote with a world-wide broadcast.

IN TANDEM: Callers at the White House arrived in tandem with the exception of one singleton: Stenio Vincent, former President of Haiti in U. S. for eye treatment. First pair was Rear Admiral Harold R. Stark and Gen. George C. Marshall, active heads of Army and Navy who came and went silently. Most colorful of the tandem series were the four Congressmen with fine Irish names who arrived early, waited in the reception room. Senators Joseph O'Mahoney, James Mead, Representatives John McCormack and Eugene Keogh came out smiling after thanking the President for releasing three vessels to Eire for much-needed food shipments.

Captains, Kings—In Bronze—Depart Fro mLondon

By Eddie Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 25 (AP).—The British are hurrying efforts today to save their Kings—the bronze and brass kind that have been riding out air raids precariously astride their bronze or marble horses.

George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, though, are standing steady and no move has been uncovered yet to get them to safety.

The latest King to be moved is Charles I, whose equestrian statute is one of the finest in the world. At first he was sand-bagged to the tune of $1,500, but now he's going to be removed.

Streets at several intersections are filled with minature sandstorms as workmen dump out the sandbags around the statutes.

Among other kings being rushed from lofty London perches are William III, George III and James II.

A special safe spot is being allocated to the statues, but where is a secret.

Some quarters say that if and when George Washington is taken down, he'll probably be billeted with George III, the king who ruled during the American Revolution.

Both Washington and Lincoln are located in open places where they could easily be hit by bombs, yet both have escaped damage.

Lincoln had a narrow miss when a bomb recently hit a church 100 yards away and others fell on a building across the street. There were bomb hits near Washington, but none closer than a block away. R—) r willingness to sign closed shop agreements with the San Francisco Metal Trades Council (A. F. of L.) The machinists, however, were not included in this agreement, since they had withdrawn from the council after it repudiated their strike.

Failure to procure the return to work of the machinists, without whom no ships can be completed or repaired, led the Navy Department earlier this week to open civil service rolls to other machinists who applied for jobs in the shipyards. Although Brown sought to recruit men from other California areas, the enrollment has been disappointing to date.

The Navy action followed repeated appeals to end the strike, made by Brown after he had conferred with President Roosevelt.

Coal Troubles Eased

Other principal labor developments yesterday:

1. United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis and other C. I. O. strategists indicated they were confident that a soft coal strike in the Southern Appalachian area, set for July 7, would be avoided by Southern soft coal operators signing a two-year contract. The strike call was issued Tuesday after representatives of the Harlan County (Kentucky) mine owners declined to sign the agreement although the other Southerners were reported willing. The U. M. W., it was indicated, expects that "pressure" on the Harlan group will result in agreement before the deadline.

2. An independent union in the Sperry Cyroscope Co., New ork, voted to strike on July 1, following collapse of negotiations on a proposed 20 per cent wage increase. About 9,000 workers are employed by the company, which manufactures such vital defense instruments as bomb sights, automatic pilots and many other delicate aeronautical implements.

3. OPM Purchasing Director Donald M. Nelson disclosed yesterday that in awarding defense contracts, the Army and Navy were "very particular" 'about avoiding communities in which labor disturbances were prevalent.

Speaking before a House Appropriations subcommittee, Nelson hinted that localities ridden by labor troubles may find themselves unable to get new defense orders or new defense plants. Nelson said the OPM "very definitely" takes into consideration labor difficulties and interferences in placing orders and determning sites for new armament factories.

4. For the first time in the defense program, a manufacturer announced he was shutting up shop permanently because of labor difficulties. The announcement, made by Frank Rosen, president of the Progress Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia, came after a prolonged strike and after rioting earlier this week in which at least five persons were injured.

"I've been in business more than 30 years," the Associated Press quoted Rosen as saying, "but I'm going to liquidate now, selling the building, stock and machinery at auction or to the Government if it wants them and forget the whole thing."

The strike, called by A. F. of L. metal workers, arose out of wage demands. A union official said most of the men averaged $11.70 a week and were asking $15.70. The company's best offer, he said, was $13.20. The union had offered to arbitrate the dispute. About 500 men were employed.

anti-discrimination clauses.

The committee of five, to be appointed by the Chief Executive, will receive and investigate complaints of discrimination and take appropriate steps to redress valid grievances.

The President acted after his attention had been called to cases in which defense industries refused jobs to Negroes and foreign-born citizens. Last week a White House conference on the problem was held with Negro organization leaders.

As a result of the President's proclamation, Dr. Asa Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car oPrters, last night called off a scheduled march of 50,000 Negroes on Washington July 1 to protest against the discrimination in defense jobs.

Randolph warned, however, that "the Government itself serves as a pattern for private employers" in the matter of discrimination. He referred specially to the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps.

Calls for Second Order

He called on the President to issue a second order "that will strike down for all time discrimination . . . in all departments of the Federal Government."

The executive order follows:

Whereas, it is the policy of the United States to encourage full participation in the national defense program by all citizens of the Unted States, regardless of race, creed, color or national origin, in the firm belief that the democratic way of life with in the Nation can be defended successfully only with the and support of all groups within its borders; and

Whereas, there is evidence that available and needed workers have bn barrd from mployment in industries engaged in defense production solely because of considerations of race, creed, color or national origin, to th detriment of workers' morale and of national unity:

Now, therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and the statutes, and as a prerequisite to the successful conduct of our national defense production effort, I do hereby reaffirm the policy of the United States that there shall be no discrimination in the employment of workers in defense industries or Government because of race, creed, color, or national origin, and I do hereby declare that it is the duyt of employers and of labor organizations, in furtherance of said policy and of this order, to provide for the full and equitable participation of all workers in defense industries, without discrimination because of race, creed, color, or national origin;

And it is hereby ordered as follows:

1. All departments and agencies of the Government of the United States concerned with vocational and training programs for defense production shall take special measures appropriate to assure that such programs are administered without discrimination because of race, creed, color, or national origin.

2. All contracting agencies of the Government of the United States shall include in all defense contracts hereafter negotiated by them a provision obligating the contractor not to discriminate against any worker because of race, creed, color, or national origin.

3. There is established in the Office of Production Management a committee on fair employment practice, which shell consist of a chairman and four other members to be appointed by the President. The chairman and members of the committee shall serve as such without compensation but shall be entitled to actual and necessary transportation, subsistence and other expenses incidental to performance of their duties. The committee shall receive and investigate complaints of discrimination in violation of the provisions of this order and shall take appropriate steps to redress grievances which it finds to be valid. The committee shall also recommend to the several departments and agencies of the Government of the United States and to the President all measures which may be deemed by it necessary or proper to effectuate the provisions of this order.

The additional naval planes, including 516 patrol bombers costing about $516,000 each, will give the Navy a total of 10,400 first-line planes by June 30, 1943. Testimony taken by the committee and made public yesterday disclosed that there are now 3,600 naval planes in service and that 7,300 are expected to be on hand by June 30, 1942.

Naval officials testified that plane deliveries were running 19 per cent behind schedule, and $25,000,000 was voted to speed up aircraft production.

They also revealed that deliveries will start this month on new 20-millimeter cannon which will largely replace .50-caliber machine guns on naval aircraft. Output will be about 100 of the new guns a month at first, which should be stepped up to 300 monthly by next year.

Under $51,031,430 voted for the Coast Guard, three special ice-breaking ships will be built for use in Greenland waters, and ten cutters to replace those transferred to Great Britain.

More Men for FBI

A total of $5,800,000 was provided for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, permitting the employment of 330 additional agents for defense work. The Office of Government Reports was allowed $1,015,000 and $27,800,765 additional for the Post-office Department. This latter sum, payable from postal revenues, is mostly the result of increased volume of mail.

The Office of Emergency Management was allowed $36,500,000 cash and $3,000,000 contractual authority.

Included in the Navy funds was $54,265,000 for new bases or improvements at existing stations. Major project was a $14,990,000 Marine Corps air base at Neuse River, N. C. One hundred thousand dollars was allowed for the F. B. I. to increase its training facilities at Quantico, Va.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt signed into law several bills affecting the national defense. One authorizes expenditure of $50,000,000 for small craft bases on the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. Another permits the Navy to use its old ships as targets rather than scrapping or selling them, while a third provides that American prize courts may be set up in war-time to handle cases of alien aircraft performing unneutral acts.

Neutrality Act To Be Ignored In Soviets' Case of war between foreign states," and that such a proclamation is "necessary to promote the security or preserve the peace of the United States, or to protct the lives of citizens of the United States."

Only Congress, by concurrent resolution, can overrule the President's decision not to apply the Neutrality Act to the new conflict. Administration spokesmen felt sure yesterday that Congress would not make any such attempt. The President has a comfortable majority in the House and Senate committees to sidetrack a Congressional attempt to apply the law to the Nazi-Communist war.

Representative Francis Case (Republican), of South Dakota, was one of several, however, who said "we may find that a Russo-German war exists even if the President doesn't." Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, charged that the President had repudiated a policy declared by Congress and Senator C. Nyle (Republican), of North Dakota, decried the move as providing one more chance for incidents which might plunge this country into war.

Diplomatic quarters speculating on the reasons for this exemption granted to Russia, believed the President may have done it in order to arm himself with a diplomatic trump card to be used to influence Japan.

Tokyo Must Decide Soon

The Japanese Government must choose soon whether to remain strictly neutral in the Soviet-German war; whether to support her Axis partner, Germany; or whether to give passive encouragement to Russia. An announcement is expected from Tokyo soon, perhaps within 48 hours.

It was said here that the President, by treating the Soviet-German war as an nudeclared conflict puts Japan on notice that any interference with American shipments to Vladivostok would be an act of war against the United States, an interference with freedom of American vessels to ply the seas.

If Japan proclaims her neutrality, it was said, Germany would suffer a sharp diplomatic defeat. A choice to side with the Axis would find Japan confronted on three sides by hostile nations: the United States, Russia and China.

The President's decision is thus viewed as an astute diplomatic move to separate Japan from the Axis.

Welles told a press conference yesterday that the State Department has received a great deal of information now from Laurence Steinhardt, United States Ambassador in Moscow. He did not disclose what the information was. Communications with Moscow were poor earlier in the week, Welles said.

400 Bombers Wage Great R. A. F. Blitz

By the Associated Press

London, June 25.—British bombers blasted occupied France today in another Channel-shaking attack which the British Broadcasting Corporation described as only the beginning of "the most gigantic air offensive known in the world's history."

Smashing hard at Germany's Western Front while the Nazi war machine is preoccupied with Russia on the East, the R. A. F. is sending over by night a new type "giant" bomber which is "more than twice the size of any earlier models," an authoritative source said, and in numbers "between 250 and 400."

This was the first time the British had mentioned 400 attacking planes. It was stated that the new power has been made possible partly by the increasing flow of United States-made planes, permitting greater risk of available craft.

In the 24 hours ending at dusk today the R. A. F. sent more bombers and fighters against Germany and German-occupied France than during any similar period since the beginning of the war, an informed source stated in discussing the new peak of ferocity in the air fighting.

Raids Long Planned

Describing the new day-and-night offensive, the B. B. C. said it "has been carefully planned during long and anxious months when we had to restrict our activity."

"But now," the B. B. C. continued, "production of aircraft, supported by the ever-increasing stream from America, enables us to strike back with a force which will prove more devastating than anything we have so far experienced in this country."

The Air Ministry said 13 German planes were shot down in the morning and afternoon raids on the French coast, adding to the official British claim of 121 planes destroyed in nine days of intensive cross-Channel bombing. The British acknowledged two planes missing from the morning raid and three in the second sweep.

(The Germans reported 11 British planes destroyed and 3 German planes destroyed during one British raid on the French coast today.)

The attackers streaked out in the morning and again in the afternoon, blowing up an ammunition train in a railroad yard at Hazelbrouck, France, and scoring direct hits on two railroad bridges. One collapsed.

Blasts Shake Coast

The area between Boulogne and Calais apparently also was attacked heavily, the English coast being shaken by loud explosions after strong forces of bombers accompanied by fighter planes sped over the Channel.

These raids followed up the fourteenth successive night attack on western Germany, the big industrial centers of Cologne and Duesseldorf and the naval base at Kiel being last night's chief targets.

A solitary German aircraft flew over northwest England this afternoon, but dropped no bombs. The British acknowledged casualties and some damage during last night's German attack on Liverpool. (The Germans said big fires were started along the waterfront.)

The new giant planes of the R. A. F. are Stirling, Halifax and Manchester bombers. The size, speed and bomb load of all three types are a guarded secret.

The use of these giants apparently has been partly responsible for the announced ability of the R. A. F. to drop a greater tonnage of bombs on Germany in the last two weeks than during the entire month of April.

The night attacks have been limited to the Ruhr and Germany's western ports, it was said, because of the brief period of darkness at this season. Undoubtedly the big bombers will penetrate farther into Germany as the nights lengthen, informed persons declared.

Raids Only Help British Can Give Russia

By the Associated Press

London, June 25.—The only military help Britain is able to give the Soviet Union is "a steady pounding of German industrial areas and occupied France" by the R. A. F., a highly placed informant declared tonight.

This source declared that this aerial pounding might in time draw German air force units from the eastern front.

Far-reaching plans are nearing fruition to give the Russians technical and economic cooperation. A mission of soldiers, sailors, airmen and transport and economic warfare experts will leave for Moscow soon, it was stated.

But there is little optimism in London over the Russian chances. This springs from a natural reluctance to indulge in any wishful thinking after the experiences of Norway, France, Flanders, Greece, Crete and North Africa.

The chance of Russian resistance vanishing in from six to eight weeks is freely discussed in the press.

The Russians are being studied to find outstanding industrial deficiencies which it is hoped can be supplied by this country and by the United States, it was stated. They probably are short of tin, rubber, hides, leather, machine tools and nickel. They have enough copper.

There have been no calls for stronger blows on the continent than those dealt by the R. A. F. Numerous military experts have pointed out in the press that the Germans probably have withdrawn a considerable force from western Europe to cope with the large Russian army, but American Army and Marine Corps observers declare that Britain has neither the equipment nor the trained men to make a landing large enough to distract the Germans.

Turkey was declared to be the largest diplomatic problem now before the British. The informant said hee hoped that "the spectacle of the Nazis faced by Russia on the east and by ourselves with the United States close behind on the west—would swing the Turks back to Britain."

Demonstrations against Russia in Madrid have been "strongly condemned" here, this source said, and he predicted "a great deal of that sort of thing" as accompaniment to a German propaganda offensive in Spain and Portugal, and also in South America.

New Lung May Give Snite Greater Freedom

Chicago, June 25 (DS).—Fred Snite, jr., the man in the iron lung, tonight had hopes of finding a portable respirator that will enable him to walk.

Snite, an infantile paralysis victim who has spent the last five years in his big respirator, left Chicago for Dayton, Ohio, to try out a new lung developed by Dr. Walter Simpson and the C. F. Kettering Foundation at Miami Valley Hospital. Snite already has a portable lung which enables him to be up and about for short periods but he hopes to find that the new type will give him greater freedom.

U. S. to Save British From Forced Sales

Jones Announces Big Loan to Halt Costly Liquidation of Assets Here

Jesse Jones, Federal Loan administrator, is considering a loan to Great Britain to provide the British with dollar exchange and avoid the necessity of their disposing of American investments and securities "at forced sale."

The loan administrator made the announcement after reports circulated here and in New York that a loan of "several hundred million dollars" was contemplated. The deal would involve Britain posting as security direct investments here and part of the British holdings of marketable American stocks and bonds. Authority for such a loan was contained in recently enacted legislation. The funds loaned would be available for purchase of supplies here aside from those delivered under the lend-lease program.

Aid Shipments Spurt

Jones' statement was issued almost simultaneously with a Commerce Department report that lend-lease and other merchandise shipments to the United Kingdom in April constituted the largest total of goods to go to that area in any month in the last 20 years.

Shipments to the United Kingdom in April totaled $128,000,000 but the department no longer reveals the nature of such shipments. The British Empire as a whole received $246,000,000 of American goods, or about 61 per cent of the $385,454,000 exports. Canada received $70,000,000, the next largest amount.

Other export increases included Russia, China—another lend-lease recipient—and Latin America.

Shipments to the United Kingdom in April were not only $32,000,000 higher than in March, but nearly two and a half times as much as in April of last year. Shipments to Japan and Africa declined.

At the beginning of the year, American investments owned by the British included $900,000,000 of direct investments and $616,000,000 of stock market securities. Some of these have been sold since.

Other officials explained that the British government has a huge amount—possibly $1,000,000,000—to pay on war supply contracts placed in this country before the United States offered lease-lend help.

Cash Will Stay Here

A few of these contracts were taken over by the Army and the RFC but the bulk of the orders placed here by the British before the Lease-Lend Act still have to be paid by the British. Thus, officials pointed out, all of the money received by the British from such a loan would stay in this country.

Persons close to Jones added that the principal purpose of the loan was to forestall the sale of the British investments in this country, at sacrifice prices, which would leave the British unable to pay for their contracts in full.

One test sale of British assets which has drawn comment in Washington was that of the American Viscose Co. to an American banking syndicate. One high official told the Associated Press that the British, in this deal got $54,000,000 for a property worth $115,000,000. This official did not blame the bankers, but said the deal demonstrated the impracticability of such sales under present market conditions.

U. S. Asks Merger Of 3 Transocean Cases in Court

Consolidation of the cases of Transocean, reputed German news agency in this country, of Manfred Zapp, public relations director for the firm here, and of his chief editor, Guenther Tonn, was requested by the Federal Government in District Court yesterday.

Each has been indicted by the District grand jury for failure to register with the State Department as an agent of a foreign nation. Consolidation would allow all three cases to be tried simultaneously.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts has set July 14 as the date for Zapp's trial in District criminal court here. Both Zapp and Tonn are now confined at Ellis Island, N. Y., as undesirable aliens.

Oral argument on the motion for consolidation will be heard Friday. The request was made for simultaneous trial by special assistants to the Attorney General George E. McNulty and Albert E. Arent, Assistant District Attorney John W. Fihelly and Attorney Arthur B. Caldwell, of the Department of Justice.

Adm. Tarrant Heads Inquiry In O-9 Sinking

Secretary Knox announced yesterday appointment of Rear Admiral William T. Tarrant, commandant of the first naval district at Boston, to head a court in inquiry to investigate the sinking of the submarine O-9, which went down off Portsmouth, N. H., last Friday with a loss of 33 officers and men.

Other members of the court are Capt. John J. Brown, captain of the Navy yard at Portsmouth; Commander Scott Umsted, a staff member of the naval war college at Newport, R. I.; and Commander Allan R. McCann, on sea duty with submarines, the United States fleet.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, told the House that the House Naval Committee would investigate the sinking as soon as the Navy Department's own inquiry has been completed and its results are sent to Congress.

German Invasion of Russia Reported Planned for Last Fall

By the Associated Press

New York, June 25.—Trustworthy sources told the Associated Press today that Germany's offensive against Russia was planned originally for last autumn.

There also were suggestions that the plan actually was behind the invasion of Poland, having been thwarted by the British-French declaration of war when Hitler had believed they would not fight.

But today's reports only went back as far as last fall, when intimations of the German plan, reaching Moscow, were said to have been responsible for Soviet Premier Molotov's sudden journey to see Hitler last November, after which Nazi pressure veered southward into the Balkans.

Mussolini's premature launching of war against Greece also was considered a factor in Hitler's change of plan.

As told by persons in a good position to know, the course of developments was about as follows:

Germany never trusted the Soviet government, despite the Russo-German non-aggression pact, and this distrust—as much as a desire to obtain bases against England—prompted Hitler to venture the Norwegian campaign.

Later, her hands busy with the war in France, Germany acquiesced when Russia annexed the three Baltic states, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, thereby eliminating a buffer area protecting East Prussia.

As a result of the Russian occupation of the Baltic states, Germany evacuated many thousands of German nationals and persons of German race, including families whose homes had been there since the days of the Teutonic knights.

All this was extremely distasteful to Germany.

Then came plausible reports that Russia was pouring even larger forces into Soviet-occupied Poland as well as into the Baltic states. Germany accordingly strengthened her forces in east Prussia and German-occupied Poland, this movement continuing even into last December, parallel with tense Balkan developments.

Meanwhile, after the fall of France, Germany had obtained agreements from Sweden and Finland for the transit of troops across their territories.

(Sweden today announced she had granted permission for the transit of not more than one division of German troops from Norway into Finland over the swedish railways. This presumably was in accordance with the transit agreement reached last year.)

Finland was accutely worried over recurrent incidents on the Russo-Fnnish frontier and began to view Germany as a power whose help might be vital in the future.

With the transit agreement signed, arms and planes began arriving in Finland from Germany, including field kitchens and artillery captured from the French. Loans from Sweden helped the Finns finance new defense construction, and Swedes close to their government predicted Sweden would fight with Finland this time if the Russians again attacked.

Germany also was ready to set, and the conflict was expected in October—but something happened to alter her plans; either some Russian move or the premature outbreak of hostilities in Greece.

In any case, German troops already were moving through Finland, within easy striking distance of the Russian border opposite Reyaniemi. Finland had no choice in the matter; but her actions since then, especially since the actual outbreak of Russo-German hostilities last Sunday, indicate her hope of retaining a somewhat flexible neutrality status and avoiding any new war on her own territory.

First Maryland Tobacco Festival To Be Sept. 26-27

The first Maryland Tobacco Festival will be held September 26 and 27 as a feature of the Charles County Fair at La Plata, State Senator Charles C. Marbury, Prince Georges County representative on the general committee in charge of arrangements, announced yesterday.

Arrangements for the festival include a pageant, displays of prize-winning tobacco, dances and the selection of a "tobacco queen" and her court. The program is being modeled after the tobacco festival held annually at South Boston, Va. Counties participating in the festival will be Anne Arundel, Calvert, Charles, St. Mary's and Prince Georges.

P. D. Brown, Charles County agricultural agent, is general chairman. He is assisted by W. Mitchell Diggs, of La Plata, as general secretary. Delegates from Prince Georges County to the arrangement committee are Joseph H. Blandford, Senator Charles C. Marbury and P. E. Clark, county agricultural agent.

Knox Predicts Long War if Reds 'Roll' Blow

Secretary Knox said yesterday that if the Red army "rolls with the punch" and falls back slowly before the German war machine, he believes the Russo-Nazi war will be a long one.

Stressing that he was speaking personally and was not to be considered a "military expert," the Navy chief declared that the outcome of the war would "all depend" upon Soviet tactics. If they make the mistake the Poles did and set up one line to defend the frontier, "it will be a short war," Knox believes.

"If they fall back and suck the other fellow in," he added, "they might make a long war of it. . . . Prolongation of the war would be generally advantageous to the United States and Great Britain."

China Object Session

Knox said that the world has had an object lesson in China of what a large nation with poor equipment and not very well trained but huge numbers of troops can do when attacked. The present Russian campaign may prove to be much the same as the Sino-Japanese war, he stated.

The Navy Secretary said that there is no intention of setting up a Pacific patrol similar to that in the Atlantic. As far as the Navy knows, he added, there are no Nazi raiders in the Pacific. He also disclosed that nothing in the way of naval aid to Russia is contemplated under the lend-lease program now.

Discussing the question of anti-aircraft protection for the fleet, Knox said that the "great majority" of ships have already been given the additional guns and protective installations shown to be necessary by the war.

All of the $300,000,000 voted by Congress for strengthening warship air defenses has been obligated and more than half of it already has been spent. The program should be completed before next June, he said.

Tots 1of 2,831 Ships

In a report on shipbuilding progress, prepared by Read Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, chief of the Bureau of Ships, and made public at Knox's press conference, it was disclosed that the Navy has a total of 2,831 vessels of all types in service, being built or undergoing conversion.

The following table, showing the status of the Navy and its construction program was made public.

The summary of naval craft built or building as of June 20, follows:

Type.	Built.	Building or converting.	Total.
Combatant (tonnage)	1,274,782	2,217,560	3,492,345
Auxiliary	154	96	250
Mine craft	108	271	378

Md. Bar to Open Convention Today In Atlantic City

Atlantic City, N. J., June 25 (AP). The forty-sixth annual convention of the Maryland State Bar Association will open here tomorrow, with several hundred lawyers expected to attend.

Chief Judge Samuel K. Dennis of the supreme bench, of Baltimore, will preside at the sessions, continuing through Saturday.

Walter C. Capper, of Cumberland, president, will address the convention tomorrow night. On Friday there will be a symposium on "The General Rules of Practice and Procedure," adopted recently by the Maryland Court of Appeals.

Gov. O'Conor of Maryland will address the group Saturday on "The Maryland Lawyer in the Present National Emergency." Other speakers at the bar association meeting will include Horace P. Whitworth, of Westernport, and Sir Gerald Campbell, of the British Consulate in New York.

Lehigh R.R. Defers Naming of President

Philadelphia, June 25 (AP).—Directors of the Lehigh Valley Railroad today received the resignation of Aibert N. Williams as president of the railroad, but deferred action on picking his successor.

Williams, who recently was appointed president of Western Union Telegraph Co., said he would remain with the Lehigh Valley until a successor is chosen. The board is scheduled to meet again July 23.

Railroad circles have heard that Revelle W. Brown, an executive of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, may be named to the railroad presidency. Brown is a vice president of the New Jersey Central in charge of operation and maintenance.

Japan Weighs Role in War; Press Warns U. S. on Soviet Aid

By Otto D. Tolischus

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, June 25.—Foreshadowing important decisions, the cabinet and army and navy authorities sat in almost continuous conferences today, which were climaxed by a liaison conference between the government and the high command and an extraordinary cabinet session, following which Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye was received in audience by Emperor Hirohito.

According to the Japan Times Advertiser, foreign office organ, "the topic of discussion at the momentous session was a question of supreme importance arising from the outbreak of Russo-German hostilities."

No decisions were announced, and apparently none have been made so far, because it was officially stated that "in view of the rapid changes in the international situation, the government will call a special cabinet meeting in the future, if necessary, so as to leave nothing undone to achieve the purpose of the total warfare structure." But if statements in the press and the speech by War Minister Eiki Tojo are any reflection of the discussions, their drift is becoming plain.

In his speech before the Arms Industrial Association, Tojo said:

"As a result of the Russo-German war the world situation has become very delicate and complex, and the war now threatens to develop into a World War. The trend of the United States cannot be gauged. Japan stands on the verge of its rise or fall.

Two-Fold Objective

"In coping with this situation the imperial army will, on the one hand, go ahead completing the holy war with China with immutable resolution, and, n the other hand, complete its military preparations to place the country on a rocklike pedestal of safety in a time of world change."

The war minister urged the arms workers therefore to redouble their efforts, but the press goes further. It not only accuses the United States and Britain of being responsible for the spread of the war, but also emphasizes that Britain and the United States are pledging aid to Russia, which, it points out, might be sent by way of Vladivostok.

This is the first mention of the maritime provinces of Siberia since the outbreak of the Russo-German conflict, and the newspaper Yomiuri warns the United States, before it sends such aid through Vladivostok, to consider the effect of such a step on Japan.

The newspaper Hochi says the Russo-German war is merely a step for advancement of President Roosevelt's plans against Germany, and that military collaboration between the United States and the Soviet Union would result in formation of a northern menace to Japan by linking Alaska, the Aleutian Islands and Vladivostok.

Pacts Called 'Scrap'

Japan is bound for the present to the triple-alliance, on the one hand, and on the other by the Russo-Japanese neutrality pact, which was sealed by the embrace of Premier Stalin and Japanese Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka at the Moscow railway station little more than two months ago. But the press is stressing that Reichsfuehrer Hitler's "bullet diplomacy" has reduced all treaties to scraps of paper, and the Kokumin claims that interruption of trans-Siberian traffic has nullified the value of some conditions of the Russo-Japanese pact, which raises the question of the pact's value to Japan.

The Yomiuri is the most outspoken. The Russo-German war, it says, involves Japan's right of self-defense. The Soviet Union, it points out, is Communist politically, and geographically it has pushed itself into the Sea of Japan. It admits that treaties make the situation awkward, but it argues that Hitler abandoned the Russo-German nonaggression pact like a worn-out sandal. On that basis it proclaims, with all due respect to Oriental ideas, that national interest is the highest morality.

"There is no other way," it concludes, "except to march forward in the fixed line of national policy and long-standing tradition."

Such considerations may explain the general nature of the joint statement of Premier Konoye and Wang Ching-Wei, head of the pro-Japanese government of China at Nanking, which pledges cooperation in the struggle against economic aggression and Communism but contains no expected details.

Britain to Get Pistols Confiscated by Dallas

Dallas, Tex. (U.P.).—Dallas gun-toting criminals are going to do their bit for British relief—whether they like it or not.

The Dallas police department has announced that all confiscated pistols and revolvers, no longer of use as evidence, will be sent to Britain for use by the British home guard. Chief J. M. Welsh said that only guns in good working order will be sent because "a gun that might not work is not the weapon to have in a tight place."

Soviet Agent Bought Bookniga Sans Inventory, Rush Admits

Raphael Rush, former vice president of Bookniga Corporation, on the witness stand in District criminal court for the third consecutive day yesterday, admitted under cross-examination by Department of Justice attorneys that the alleged Communist-inspired propaganda agency was sold without inventory.

The corporation was bought by Boris Nikolski, American manager of the Soviet book trust for $14,000, it was alleged by the prosecution.

Rush also admitted to writing 10,000 copies of a letter stating:

"The U. S. S. R. is making great progress in establishing a new social, educational and independent order among its people."

He is indicted on charges of failure to register as a foreign agent with the State Department and conspiracy, as is Norman Weinberg, secretary-treasurer of the organization. Morris Liskin, president of Bookniga, has pleaded guilty to the failure to register charge and is on trial only for conspiracy.

Child Beating and Scalding Case Will Go to Jury Today

Whether Mrs. Evelyn N. Stewart is guilty of beating and scalding her 7-year-old son, Jimmy, will be taken up this morning by a District Court jury of nine men and three women.

Prosecutor Bernard Margolius, assistant United States attorney, and Defense Attorney Paul S. Sedgewick rested their cases late yesterday after long summations. Justice T. Alan Goldsborough will deliver his charge to the jury at 10 a. m. today.

A defense motion that the case be taken from the jury on the grounds the Government failed to produce sufficient evidence was denied by the court.

Three additional witnesses were presented by the prosecution earlier yesterday.

Intelligent Child

"Jimmy is an ordinary child, intelligent and very kind," said Leo Braver, of 4015 Georgia Avenue Northwest, where Mrs. Stewart lived with her young son prior ot her second marriage to Irwin Stewart.

Braver testified that the child was out on the streets at night while his mother entertained visitors. "Jimmy was a neglected child," he added.

Mrs. Herbert Jones, who formerly lived at 2133 First Street Northwest, where Mrs. Stewart allegedly beat and burned Jimmy, said:

"She (Mrs. Stewart) was always whipping the child. We would hear the child crying and begging her to stop, and we could hear the straps on the child's body."

"How frequently?" asked Margolius.

"I wouldn't say every night," replied Mrs. Jones, "but almost every night."

Policeman Testifies

Private Earl Alber, of the Metropolitan Police, testified he took down Mrs. Stewart's testimony verbatim when she was arrested April 16—the day after she allegedly beat Jimmy and placed him in a tub of hot water. Mrs. Stewart denied her testimony to the police when she was on the witness stand Tuesday.

As pointed out by attorneys in their summations the jury must try to reach the truth on two important issues before coming to a decision:

1. Whether Jimmy was struck "three or four times" as Mrs. Stewart testified, or whether he was beaten for "from 10 to 15 minutes" as another resident of the house testified when the case opened last week.

2. Whether Jimmy was "forced" into a scalding hot bath, or whether his mother told him to get into the bathtub in which the water adjustment was allegedly faulty.

D. C. Names Board To Probe Police

reference to the Detective Bureau.

It was made clear that the municipal investigation will not work in "competition" with the Congressional inquiry. The three-man committee, it was announced, will attend all hearings on Capitol Hill to absorb "background" for their own probe.

"There will be no whitewash," said Commissioner Young. "We want a comprehensive and unbiased survey to find out just what we need to make our police force the best in the country."

Secretary of War Stimson yesterday advised Chairman Jennings Randolph of the House District Committee, that the War Department is considering his suggestion on the possibility of assigning the 703d Military Police Battalion, now in training at Arlington Cantonement, to duty in the Capital.

Chairman Schulte, of the House subcommittee investigating the Metropolitan Police, meanwhile announced his intention of proceeding on schedule despite the inability of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, to testify at the opening session at 10 a. m. tomorrow. Inspector James F. Beckett will be substituted for Brown, who is suffering from an ankle infection, Schulte said.

Senator Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, yesterday declared that the recent series of attacks on women might be attributed to the department's lack of knowledge about new arrivals in the city. He suggested that the police "throw out a drag-net and bring these fellows in."

At the same time, Representative Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, called for stronger police methods, declaring that "a criminal is a criminal and you can't handle them—or potential criminals—with kid gloves."

Flying Knitting Needles

THE SKY WAY—The American Red Cross will give women air passengers a chance to occupy their hands and aid British war sufferers at the same time. As they speed through the sky they can ask the plane steward for Red Cross wool and knitting needles. The idea will be tried out on the New York to Washington, D. C., flight and extended to other flights if it proves popular. Mrs. Dwight Davis (right), director of Red Cross volunteer services, is shown at Washington National Airport demonstrating Red Cross knitting bag to Caroline Hood, Rockefeller Center's "Flying Ambassadress," who arrived from New York via Eastern Airlines, which will introduce the idea. On the New York to Washington air trip there is ample time to knit a small wool square which will become part of a Red Cross afghan for British war victims

Suspect Caught In Rape of Clerk

Columbia Road Northwest yesterday. Mrs. Gertrude Elliott, 1414 Girard Street Northwest, told police that the man entered the place and "made passes at her." He grabbed her by the wrist, she said, and when she fled to the rear of the shop, he attempted to rifle the cash register. Teh man left the place, she said, when she said she would call police. A customer came in a few minutes later and phoned the Tenth Precinct. Police arrived and were given the name and description of the man.

Meanwhile, Commissioner John Russell Young visited detective headquarters last night and made a pep talk to detectives. It was the first time the Commissioner had visited headquarters since its installation in the new Municipal Building.

Suspicious Character

Police also are investigating the story of a woman who said a suspicious-acting man entered her store Tuesday. Mrs. Madeline Platt, 700 block Third Street Northwest, said the man was able to escape because a policeman refused to answer cries for help.

Detectives are running down another report of a man resembling the robber-rapist. A young woman employed in a dry cleaning establishment in the 2800 block Fourteenth Street Northwest, said yesterday a man paused in front of her store and peered at her through the glass.

While police were redoubling their efforts in their investigation, a 21-year-old delivery boy was robbed of $5 last night near the Roosevelt Hotel. Charles Samuel, colored, told police he was held up at the point of a knife by a colored man while on the way back to the Roosevelt Pharmacy where he is employed.

Miss Harper was alone in the store when the man entered about 9:30 a. m. He held a nickel-plated revolver in his left hand which he partially concealed by a handkerchief.

"Keep quiet and give me your money and I won't hurt you," Miss Harper quoted the intruder.

Hiding his gun from the view of passersby on the sidewalk behind a pile of laundry boxes, the bandit ordered Miss Harper into a back room, she said.

He walked behind the counter, scooped $44.02 in bills and change from a cash register and walked toward the door. He fled when he broke a window pane.

Tax Rise in D. C. Held Unnecessary

menton the bill Saturday and Monday, the District may be compelled to wait several days for 1942 operating funds.

Principal changes in the House bill agreed upon by the District Appropriations Subcommittee were disclosed yesterday by Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, subcommittee chairman. Subject to revision by the full committee today, they are:

Highway Department, $6,214,000 total, $218,162 over the House bill; Water Department, $2,864,000 total, $25,000 increase.

Addition of 44 men to the Police Department over the 54-man increase voted by the House, the increase to include four expert crime investigators to be paid $3,600 a year, captain's wages.

Increase of $100,000 in direct relief to provide for persons dropped from WPA rolls July 1.

To compensate for WPA labor loss on sewer construction projects, $175,000 over the House figure of $200,000.

Deletion of House provision to require non-residents to pay tuition for children attending District schools.

To start construction of a new elementary school at Eleventh and G Streets Southeast to replace the Cranch, Tyler and Van Ness Schools, $100,000 for a project ultimately to cost $500,000.

Construction of a new extensible eight-room elementary school, four rooms to be left uncompleted, at Hillside Road and Alabama Avenue Southeast, $167,500.

Purchase of elementary school site at New Jersey Avenue and P Street Northwest for replacement of the Morse and Twining Schools, $70,000.

For plans and purchase of land approaches for Anacostia River Bridge and for Anacostia Parkway at northern end of the Naval Air Station, $100,000.

Plans for a new firehouse at North Capitol and Crittenden Streets Northwest, $2,000, the station to cost no more than $100,000.

Comfort stations, $40,0000.

Cooling of sentiment for higher taxes, particularly in the House, was attributed by leaders to the discovery that District officials, in preparing estimates, calculated 1942 revenues extremely conservatively. If, after six months' operation in 1942, the District discovers it needs new revenues, tax legislation may be drafted to provide them.

Ohio Suspect In Strieff Case Cleared

Another suspect in the rape-slaying of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff was cleared yesterday, leaving police without a single lead although a special supersquad of detectives is still pressing the search for her murderer.

Detective Sergt. Aubrey M. Tolson, who had hurried to Zanesville, Ohio, reported via phone to Capt. Ira Kec that the suspect arrested there was merely a braggart who had nothing to do with the case.

Zanesville police had arrested the suspect as a drunk, who on hearing him make mysterious references to the Strieff slaying, and on noting numoreus abrasions and scratches on the body, the Ohio town authorities had notified District officials. One of the suspect's hands had been bitten by human teeth.

Tolson reported that the suspect was about 45 years old and that he had lived in a Washington mission for a brief period about a year ago. The detective sergeant learned that the suspect had been in Cambridge, Ohio, June 15, when the 23-year-old War Department employe disappeared, and June 16, when her body was found.

The suspect had been taking treatments for his wounds, and his alibi was confirmed by a physician.

Meanwhile, police were awaiting a report from the Federal Bureau of Investigation on the particles of sand found on Miss Strieff's shoes in an attempt to shed light on the route the girl took when she left her home, 2140 Nineteenth Street Northwest, Sunday afternoon, June 15, to buy a stick of butter.

Woman on Jury For Penksa's Murder Trial

Prosecution of Gazil A. Penska, 32, for first-degree murder in the shotgun slaying of Joseph L. Caliguire at Eighth and F Streets Northeast last March 15, will continue this morning followig the opening of the case in the District Criminal Court of Justice Jesse C. Adkins yesterday.

A jury of 11 men and 1 woman, 9 of whom served in the jury which returned a verdict of second-degree murder in the Sibley case, were impaneled yesterday.

The prosecutor, Assistant United States Attorney Allen J. Krause, placed eight witnesses on the stand in an attempt to obtain a clear picture of the sidewalk stlaying in which Penksa is charged with taking the life of his sister-in-law's alleged friend.

In rapid-fire cross examination defense Attorney Charles Ford attempted to break down the testimony of Detective Sergeant Edward E. Scott who claims he wrote down in a notebook these direct statements from Penksa immediately after the slaying:

"I aimed for his heart. I'm a good shot too. I hit what I'm aiming for. When I shoot, I shoot to kill.

"I guess I'll smoke for this and I guess I may as well get it over with now."

Brakes Again Delay B-19's Maiden Flight

Santa Monica, Calif., June 25 (AP).—Brake trouble for the second time caused postponement today of the maiden flight of the Army's huge bomber, the B-19.

A statement by engineers representing the Army and the Douglas Aircraft Co., which built the $3,500,000 bomber for the Air Corps, said "unsatisfactory conditions of grabbing in the huge brakes" had caused the decision to completely correct the source of the trouble before attempting the flight from Clover Field to March Field, 75 miles east of Santa Monica.

London, June 25 (AP).—Ronald Ian Campbell, former British Minister to Yugoslavia who just has been named minister to Washington, was knighted by King George VI today. The King handed him the insignia of a knight commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George in a ceremony at Buckingham Palace.

Leaving their posts because of physical disability are Detective Sergeants Henry M. Jett and Charles E. Cannon. The retirements are effective June 30.

To replace Sheldon, Private Karl G. McCormick was made a full sergeant. He has been an acting sergeant also since March.

205 Bombers A Month Aim Of Ford Plant

By David J. Wilkie
Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, June 25.—The Ford Motor Co. will build 205 huge bomber planes a month in the new airplane factory it has under construction on a 975-acre tract of land 4 miles east of Ypsilanti, Mich. Seventy-five of the number will be completely assembled bombers and 130 will be in "knocked down" shape to be finally assembled at Government-owned plants at Tulsa, Okla., and Fort Worth, Tex.

This became known definitely today with announcement that the Defense Plant Corporation has allocated $47,520,171 to the project. Of this amount $31,961,300 will be spent on land improvements and buildings and $15,458,871 will go for plant equipment.

As now contemplated the bomber plant with its own arport, hangers, main assembly buildings, machine shop, power plant and offices will be the largest airplane factory in the United States, according to aviation authorities here.

Can Double Output

Ford engineers said that if necessary output of completely assembled planes can be doubled.

With announcement of the allocation of funds for the huge factory it was disclosed that an initial order for 1,200 bombers to Ford has been stepped up to 2,000. They are to be the 28-ton Consolidate B-24-D, long-range, heavy duty craft.

Company officials said today that with the additional orders just assigned the Ford bomber production contracts now amount to close to $420,000,000. When peak production is reached, probably a year from now, close to 60,000 workers are expected to be employed on a two-shift basis of operations in the bomber factory.

Training Already Started

Training of some of these workers already has begun in the Ford trade schools. Many workers will be transferred from the company's River Rouge automobile factory.

Construction work on the bomber plant has been under way for several months on a one-shift basis. The whole project now will be stepped up to three shifts a day.

Meanwhile the Ford company already has begun preliminary work on designing and turning out the tricycle landing gears for the planes. The landing gear production unit, set up in the company's River Rouge automobile tire factory, will be moved later this year to the bomber factory near Ypsilanti.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer

I notice with a bit of kiln-dried approval that they expect to reduce the Army age to about 28 years of the realm.

They had it up to 35, which I figured was a little old for a man to run around dipping sand in his hip pockets.

A man of 35 is about as settled as a stone wall in a swamp. A fellow of 28 can take it in his stride like Elisa Crossing the Ohio.

Sooner or later, we will reduce the Army age and raise the Boy Scouts. Then the lads will be around 17 and tie granny knots in one another's parachutes.

You might think that's young. But don't forget the bombers are declaring even the babies in on this one.

'We Got Lost . . .'

Construction of Most Warships Reported Ahead of Schedule

By Dan Rogers
United Press Staff Writer

New York, June 25.—Commercial shipyards are giving the navy yards a substantial "leg up" toward the goal of attaining a real "two-ocean" Navy in a hurry.

Hurry is a relative term, for building ships, especially warships, still is a project involving many months if not several years. But correspondents visiting Eastern yards working on defense orders came away with the impression that the work was going forward night and day speedily and efficiently.

In one important category—that of turning liners into troop carriers and freighters into escort aircraft carriers capable of basing 12 to 15 warplanes—unbelievable speed is being shown by the big Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co.

The luxury liner America, of 27,000 tons and the biggest ever built in this country, steamed into Newport News from a cruise in the Caribbean to be made ready. Seventeen hours later the big vessel had been painted sooty gray. At 11 a. m. on the twelfth day after she arrived the liner had been converted into a troop carrier, ready to sail with 5,000 soldiers, and was recommissioned as the U. S. S. West Point.

Warships Ahead of Schedule

The company is converting modern cargo ships such as the Mormacland into miniature aircraft carriers in 90 days each.

Almost every heavy warship in Government or private yards is ahead of schedule.

The principal center of shipbuilding in the East is at Norfolk and Newport News, separated by Hampton Roads and the James River. Norfolk is the home of the Portsmouth Navy Yards and Newport News of the Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. of the same name.

The latter company has nearing completion the 5,000-ton battleship Indiana and the aircraft carrier Hornet and is building six other aircraft carriers, four cruisers and five passenger-cargo ships, besides the conversion work already mentioned and extensive repair work on both American and British vessels. Its defense contracts total $407,000,000.

At New London, Conn., the Electric Boat Co., yards are building modern, long-range submarines for the battle fleet nine at a time. Here 41 submarines of the big 1,500-ton ocean-going type are being built. At Manitowoc, Wis., the country's only other submarine shipyard is building 10.

17 Battleships Building

A survey of private shipyards of the Nation shows a total of $3,325,482,960 of naval work now contracted, plus $620,242,000 of commercial work on the ways. Much of this latter will go to the Government. There are 138 privately owned and naval shipyards in this country.

Now under construction in naval yards are 14 battleships, 24 submarines, 44 destroyers, 3 minesweepers, 4 submarine tenders, 6 seaplane tenders and 1 minelayer. Naval craft under way in private yards include 3 battleships, 12 aircraft carriers, 152 destroyers, 14 heavy cruisers, 43 light cruisers, 152 destroyer, 14 heavy cruisers, 43 light cruisers, 51 submarines and numerous lighter craft.

In private shipyards 101,094 men were employed as of January 1, and more than 90,000 others are employed in navy yards.

Rickenbacker Flies Back Home

New York, June 25 (INS).—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker came home today, almost exactly four months after he was critically injured in the crash of an Eastern Air Lines plane near Atlanta. The American World War ace and president of E. A. L. came home by plane, grinning the grin that made him famous in his war days.

"I'm all right," he said, as he walked from the plane with the help of a cane. "Just a few aches and pains. I'll be back on the job Monday—in a gentle way."

Nazi Prisoners' Escape Plots Keep Canadian Guards on Toes

By Ruth Cowan
Associated Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in Ontario, June 25.—Nazi military training apparently includes lessons in "how to escape from prison if captured."

This has been deducted by Canadian prison authorities in charge of war prison camps to which Britain has sent "5,000 to 50,000" German aviators, submarine crew members, sailors and soldiers.

The war prisoners, officers and men, spend their spare time—at least that part they have left from discussions on how shortly they are going to run Canada!—in planning methods of escape.

So ingenious have been these methods that the guards have to keep constantly on the alert. It is a game of wits.

Col. Hubert Stethem, director of internment operations for the Dominion of Canada, encountered as he made a tour of the camps—there are "between 10 and 25" scattered throughout the country—said the war prisoner's primary thought is escape.

Each camp is surrounded by a ten-foot barbed wire fence. There is an outer fence with flood lights and sentry towers at intervals.

Tunneling is a favorite way of trying to get out. It goes on all the time. The guards' problem is to find out just where—and in time.

The prisoners are clever in turning anything they can get hold of into implements of escape. The director said his headquarters has quite a collection of home-made saws, files and scoops taken away from the prisoners.

A number has escaped—one group of 28 through a tunnel—but their success score in staying free to date, said Col. Stethem, is one. Canadian war prisoners have done better than that in escaping from German prisons, he added.

That one German war prisoner still at large is Baron Franz von Werra, an aviator, who dropped from a prison train and made his way undetected into the United States. Arrested later for illegal entry, he jumped bond and fled to South America.

Col. Stethem said a special plan of capture has been worked out. When an escape is discovered the guards, provincial police and the Royal Canadian "Mounties" go into action.

The officers, mostly pilots downed in England, have given the most trouble. They are provocative, Col. Stethem said, but added that they are quieting down. The officers are in separate camps and they have their orderlies.

Often Pugnacious

Noncommissioned officers and enlisted men are often pugnacious and non-cooperative toward the guards, but they seldom are disrespectful to an officer. "No trained soldier is," said Col. Stethem.

He said the German prisoners show no appreciation of kindness, that their attitude toward brutality in combat is that "it is war," and that there is little apparent religious feeling.

Most of the officers and men are 22 to 23 years old. There are but few men older than 30 and fewer still over 40. There are no combat prisoners under 18, but there are some "very young ship's boys who are more Nazi than the others," Col. Stethem said.

The Gestapo is reported active in the camps, and the few men who show friendliness apparently are kept under close surveillance by their comrades. In general the prisoners get along well with one another, but there is an occasional fight among the sailors.

Col. Stethem stressed that Canada is adhering strictly to the Geneva international agreement regarding prisoners of war. The camps are inspected every two months by representatives of the Swiss government on behalf of Germany. Also inspections are made by the International Red Cross.

Youth of 20 First to Heed Britain's Call

By Inez Robb
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, June 25.—A 20-year-old New England boy who figures he can't live in the same world with "a man who behaves like Hitler" was accepted today by Great Britain as the first American volunteer in her drive to recruit a vast corps of American radio technicians to man the new radio air-defense weapons of the British Isles.

Robert Lyle Ames, whose maternal ancestors came to Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1628 with Gov. John Endicott, has been selected from the thousands who have volunteered for this noncombatant service since recruiting headquarters were opened in New York last week.

When 19 other volunteers have passed satisfactorily a stiff written examination, in which young Ames scored 99.5, this preliminary group of 20 will be sent overseas as the first American unit of Britain's civilian technical corps.

This slim young man read a story about the British call for technical volunteers in a Schenectady, N. Y., paper.

So after he had finished his night shift in Schenectady's General Electric Co. plant, where he has been working on America's radio defense apparatus, he boarded a train for New York City.

Anarchic Washington

Within 24 hours two more robberies, accompanied in one case by a successful rape and in the other by an attempted rape that was frustrated only by accident, have occurred in Washington. Meanwhile the police investigations of two recent cases of rape accompanied by murder have apparently led nowhere. Thus it is obvious that a condition not altogether removed from downright anarchy prevails in the capital of a Nation which has embarked on the mission of restoring international order and justice to an anarchic world. No one, of course, denies that the whole problem of law enforcement and crime prevention here is beset with enormous difficulties. Indeed, those difficulties are scarcely duplicated in any other city. The war boom and the influx of a vast and heterogeneous population from all parts of the country have created in the District of Columbia a set of conditions similar in many respects to the nineteenth century frontier communities or the early twentieth century oil communities. Yet sexual crimes of the sort which have become almost commonplace in Washington were virtually unknown even in the most violent frontier communities. The trouble is that no clue seems to be in sight. It is not even known whether these crimes are the work of a single criminal or of several. But this much is quite plain: Any person whose disordered instincts may tempt him to such crimes knows now that there is one place where he can commit them with a much better than even chance of escaping capture and punishment.

British Appointments

The importance which Great Britain attaches to the United States is amply attested by the constant additions and changes which have recently been made in its diplomatic set-up. Till Sir Gerald Campbell was moved to New York, where he has been made director general of Britain's information service, there were three ministers in addition to an ambassador. Sir Gerald's place as minister is to be taken by another Campbell, Sir Ronald. The new Campbell is a distinguished member of Britain's diplomatic service. He was sent to Belgrade a few months before the Nazi attack on Yugoslavia, and stayed with the government during its wanderings after the capital had become untenable. In particular he will be welcome because of his experience in America. On two occasions, once during World War I, he has served in Washington. His arrival, however, will still leave a vacancy in the hierarchy of the British Embassy, for another of the ministers, Nevile Butler, has now been shifted to London. Mr. Butler was at Lord Lothian's right hand during the exhausting days when Lord Lothian was running the Embassy without ministerial aides. He was counselor of embassy then, and became charge d'affaires on Lord Lothian's lamentable death. For his services he was raised to ministerial rank, and now he receives a further promotion, his new post being to take charge of the American division of the Foreign Office. Hitherto only a counselor of embassy has held this position. But American affairs have becomes so vital a concern for Britain's diplomacy that it was felt that the post should be filled by a minister. First-hand knowledge of this country is so vital to the policy-makers in London that it was fitting that the Foreign Office should come to Washington for its choice and withdraw Mr. Butler from the American scene.

Birth And Taxes

A correspondent in the New York Times suggests, as an alternative to a Congressional project for taxing married couples as one unit, that bachelors should be mulcted more. There is something in the suggestion. The tax laws certainly discriminate in favor of bachelors by whatever criterion is chosen. Let us think of public policy. From now on public policy should be concerned with the encouragement of marriage. A great destiny opens up for the United States on the overthrow of Hitlerism. Yet the actuaries still cling to their estimate of a stationary population for the United States before another decade has elapsed. Great destinies and small families go ill together. And, if the tax laws militate against the raising of families, our country to that extent will not be in the same position of living up to its world responsibilities.

Risks And Rewards

The first reaction in this country to the news of the German assault on Russia was one of undisguised relief and even rejoicing. Here were two of the most ferocious and inhuman dictatorships in history about to spring at each other's throats. The prospect was not unpleasing. The consequences, it was promptly assumed, could only be advantageous to Great Britain. At the very least, it was said, it would tend to give that hard-pressed nation a valuable breathing spell in which to build up her defenses and increase her offensive capacity.

This optimistic belief happens to be as dangerous as it is unsound. Hitler and his generals are certainly under no illusions as to the risks Germany runs in undertaking a war on Russia at this time. They know that so long as the Reich is embroiled in the east she will have little force to spare for the war on England. They know, further, that a setback in the east would mean the beginning of the end of the Nazi bid for world power. They have taken the risk nonetheless. For if the venture is successful, and does not take too long a time, Germany may profit by it enormously.

It is quite true that as long as the Russian war lasts, time will be vouchsafed to the British and to us. But every moment of that time is precious and should not be wasted. Should Hitler overcome Russian resistance, and the odds are definitely in his favor, he would not only be placed in possession of a vast store of supplies, including wheat and oil. He would have gained new vantage points of tremendous strategic value either for a bristling peace offensive or for an assault on the Suez Canal and British shipping lanes in the Indian Ocean. And, with the potential menace from the east removed, he would be able to employ his full force against the British, too.

The British are therefore under compulsion to use the present occasion for offensive air operations on a scale they have never before attempted. They must now strain every nerve to weaken Germany's industrial capacity and to prevent a quick Nazi victory over Russia. By the same token our safety depends on how rapidly we can increase aid to Britain in every category so that this golden moment will not be lost. This is no time for complacence on our part. The situation, on the contrary, calls for far-reaching measures by this country in behalf of Great Britain. Aid to Britain must be without stint and without limit. If Hitler is not to be allowed to capitalize his wanton assault on Russia, the combination of powers now arrayed against him must see to it that his venture to the east leads to a definite weakening rather than to a strengthening of Germany's might.

Younger Officers

Too much deadwood in the officer corps was admittedly one of the major peacetime errors of military organization in France and Britain. Imaginative and audacious officers were often shunted aside to make way for the less able. France never did repair her fatal inadequacy in this respect and paid a frightful penalty for it. Britain, with more time and more resiliency, put younger men in place of many of the officers who started the war. But the change was made in wartime. Our War Department clearly has no intention of waiting for a shooting war before making similar changes. Ever since Gen. Marshall was jumped over the heads of his seniors to become Chief of Staff, the emphasis has been on advancing younger men as rapidly as their qualifications entitled them to promotion. With an expanding Army such as we now have, this of course was to be expected, particularly in the ranks below lieutenant colonel. Gen. Marshall has just revealed, moreover, that through a "very drastic" selective process, several hundred officers have been chosen for "jump" promotions to the righer ranks. This process, it is reported, will continue through the summer and fall, on the basis of performance in forthcoming maneuvers. In addition, the Chief of Staff has announced that of the Army's 500 permanent colonels between the ages of 56 and 64, only about 30 command troops in the field—the rest being assigned to staff duty.

Youth is no guarantee, naturally, of military ability, yet we can hardly ignore the fact that youth is high in the councils of the three armed forces which may conceivably challenge American security—the German army, the German air force and the Japanese Navy. So far Germany's "secret weapon" has been superb staff work initiated and carried out by younger generals. There has been no recent war test of the Japanese navy's officer personnel, but Japanese flag officers and captains—indeed, officers in the intermediate grades—are younger on the average than ours, and correspondingly better able to withstand campaign strains. Obviously there can be no hard and fast dividing line of age at which an Army or Navy officer's usefulness ceases. Both the War and Navy Departments are constantly profiting from the counsels of experienced officers who are technically over age. But mechanized war as waged today and is likely to develop requires a new dynamism. It demands a judicious welding of experience and youth, and this is one of the toughest selective jobs confronting our Army and Navy boards. The War Department, at least, seems to be on the right track.

Labor Shortages

Convincing testimony to the rapidity with which the unemployed are being absorbed by industry was supplied by Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, in a recent address at Denver before representatives of the public employment services. Mr. Altmeyer warned his audience not to be deceived by the fact that over 5,000,000 persons are listed on the active files of the unemployment offices. Even in a peak employment year such as 1929, he pointed out, at least 2,000,000 persons were temporarily unemployed. That indicates that the present available free labor supply is much less than is commonly assumed. As a matter of fact, the existence of labor bottlenecks in defense industries has already become acute. In 16 defense occupations, according to Mr. Altmeyer, not a single person is registered at any employment office in the entire United States, while shortages exist in over 100 essential defense occupations. These shortages, which developed before our defense program got fully under way, have made it necessary to recruit and train less skilled or unskilled workers, for employment in defense industries.

As a result, the duties of the employment services become increasingly onerous and difficult as time goes on. As Mr. Altmeyer says, "It is no great trick to match the man and the job when the office files are bulging with the applications of highly skilled and experienced men in every possible occupation." But it takes a very complete knowledge of the labor market and sound judgment in evaluating the capacities of work seekers to make satisfactory placements under present conditions. The employment services also have great responsibilities to discharge in advising training agencies as to where labor shortages are greatest, in certifying persons for special types of training, and finally in making certain that WPA workers are given full opportunity to participate in these training programs. The facts cited by the Chairman of the Social Security Board indirectly justify the decision of Congress to cut WPA appropriations by a substantial amount. While the dismissal of WPA workers will cause temporary hardships, most of the employables dropped from work relief rolls will, undoubtedly, soon find jobs, while the unemployable residue should be taken care of by local relief agencies instead of by the Federal Government.

Neutral Ground

Of all the great names of baseball, the two greatest are Tyrus Raymond Cobb and George Herman Ruth. It is still an open question as to which name belongs at the very top, and the question is likely to remain open till the end of time. Though their careers overlapped for some years, each really belongs to a different epoch of the game. Cobb's was the epoch of the dead ball, the far-flung outfields and the low scores, when the whole strategy of a game was to wangle a run somehow around the bases. The great qualities in a ballplayer were nerve, speed, and quickness of wit. Cobb had them all. He had the surest of batting eyes, yet he seldom hit for extra bases. But then he could steal the bases at will. Ruth, however, was the exemplar, indeed, the founder of the free swinging, horizon-busting, one-big-inning-is-all-we-need school of the 1920's, when the consumption of baseballs was anywhere from a barrelful to a carload per game. In Cobb's early days, three or four baseballs sufficed for the afternoon.

But if we can never know which of the two was really the greater hitter and the greater outfielder, we shall soon know which is the better golfer. Whichever it is, of course, he will still be a long way from the best. Ty Cobb and the Babe met yesterday on the Commonwealth links in Boston for the first round of a match for charity which is to settle, one way or the other, a rivalry and dispute of long standing. As you might have guessed, the Babe can get plenty of distance into his drives. But it is Cobb, past master of the bunt, who fares better on the putting greens. Thus it is another test of the classical versus the Wagnerian manner, though to be sure, Mr. Cobb's golf is by no means as superbly classical, nor Mr. Ruth's golf as magnificently Wagnerian, as their exploits of old in the American League ball parks.

THE FIRST INTERVIEW

There is a place upon this earth today
Where I shall talk with you before I die.
Somewhere in future time, though far away,
Must be that strong, sweet hour, when I shall try
To tell my love: I know not when nor where,
Yet every step I take shall bring me there.

Defends Police Force

All of this morning I spent down at Fifth and S Streets. I was a voluntary witness in a traffic infraction. While waiting I saw the various policemen come and go with their reports. I also went upstairs to the Traffic Court room. I have been reading much in the newspapers about the desirability of a police shake-up and while I am confessedly ignorant of the detailed reasons for the suggested shake-up, I do know that for 3 hours I carefully observed the policemen and I was impressed by their courtesy to everyone, white and colored, and their concentration on their duties. Also I thought that most of the men looked mentally alert and physically fit.

The atmosphere of the Traffic Court room astonished me, because in the past I had been given to understand that conditions there were far from good. On the contrary, however, the judge, policemen, witnesses and prisoners behaved in a manner which seemed to me above reproach.

I do not wish to seem like a Pollyanna describing Utopia, but I do wish to give credit where credit is due as I saw it on an ordinary routine day. Undoubtedly there must be lamentable exceptions to the efficiency of the personnel, but it would seem to me to be wiser to replace carefully rather than to "blitzkrieg" the Washington police force.

With events in other countries becoming more confused and horrible, I think that it behooves each American Citizen to be increasingly vigilant of their civic responsibilities in their particular neck of the woods so that injustice, the breeder of disillusionment and discontent, will never find a feeding ground in the bloodstream of the United States of America

Park Tableau

It was a fine Saturday afternoon. Half the benches in the park were empty. The man, being weary, decided to lie down on one of them. Soon he was aroused. The policeman said, "It's a violation of the law to lie on the benches. Sit up."

All right, the man sat up. So sitting there, musing awhile, he thoughtlessly rested himself on one elbow. It wasn't long, however, before this culprit was suddenly confronted by the same busy-bee of an officer who said, "Didn't I tell you not to lie on the benches?" Now get out of the park," he added, grabbing the man by the sleeve.

The man was a little unnerved by such zeal for law and order so suddenly exercised upon him, but, nevertheless, he replied, "You mean I can't sit down in a public park?" And promptly sat down again under the stern gaze of the law.

With this parting shot, "The next time I catch you lying on the benches, I'm gonna lock you up," the officer proceeded to the street, mounted his iron horse, and rode away.

The above happened to this writer. You may imagine my feelings and thoughts about dumb policemen who in these times have nothing better to do than to harass unoffending citizens.

Discrimination In Defense

Your editorial emphasizing the need for employers of labor and labor unions to facilitate the entry of Negroes into industry and defense work was excellent. You are correct in stating that totalitarian nations ridicule our pretentions of democracy when they can point out to their own and conquered countries the fact that our Army, our Navy and our governmental agencies discriminate against and segregate racial minorities.

The enemies of democracy are first, those race prejudiced employers or Government department heads whose view of race is identical with the ideology of the dictators of Italy and Germany. The Russian dictator, bad as his political philosophy may be, is far more Christian, tolerant and humane than Mussolini or Hitler and the embryonic Hitlers in America.

If labor unions ever deserve relegation to the social scrap heap it will be largely because of the discriminatory attitude toward laborers of minority groups.

America is going to need a unity of spirit, thought and action far beyond any previous requirement of solidarity in its history. Except for England we practically stand alone. Our governmental and social practices of discrimination and segregation do not recommend us highly to peoples of Asia, Africa or South America. A nation whose ideology is based on a philosophy of racial supremacy, whether it is the Hitler type or the Bilbo type can't rule the world.

Again I congratulate you upon the fearless statement of truth and your insistence that we achieve unity by opening up opportunities for service in industry, in our armed forces and in government to all Americans on a plane of democratic equality. E. B. HENDERSON.

Concerning The Need For International Cooperation

To isolate and surround the United States is the recognized aim of the Axis Powers. To have accepted isolation in advance would have been to accept defeat without a fight. To return to isolation following a victorious war would be again to win the war only to lose the peace.

A free world order, led by the United States, is not merely desirable to prevent a general return to the Dark Ages, but is a necessity for the proper defense of this country and for its future economic advancement. With Britain's naval security undermined by the fall of Europe and advent of air power, the base of sea power is shifting westward to North America, midway between Europe and Asia. A world balance of power, with new nations elsewhere serving to replace the lost democracies of Europe, is now the only means of permanent national security for the United States. And development of the unused resources—human and material—of the so-called "colonial" countries is the main avenue left for employment of our surplus capital.

But if an international political and military order of any kind is to be set up, it will have to be founded upon an international economic system. None such now exists, the old order based upon the Pax Britannica having been swept away. A new order, therefore, needs to be created during the next few years.

And it will have to be grounded upon new principles of international cooperation and international social direction. For if the postwar economic order is left to the direction of the same forces which controlled the last postwar reconstruction, the same sort of results will probably be achieved. That is, there will be a return to national isolation.

It may be confidently expected that there will be tremendous pressure for a return to isolation after the war—even assuming an Anglo-American victory; in case of an Axis victory, isolation will be forced upon us, of course. Conditions after the war, if left to the play of laissez-faire economic forces, will favor if not compel a nationalistic reaction. With Europe in ruins and all the world's liquid capital concentrated in this country; with all the raw material markets hopelessly glutted and universal unemployment spreading, there will be tremendous dumping of commodities upon the American market to secure dollars. There will be pressure for all sorts of unsound international loans.

The natural result will be another emergency tariff like that of 1920, stringent immigration restrictions, worldwide economic warfare, and a veritable conspiracy to use America's plethoric financial resources for another "new era" of unholy speculation and flashy promotions of whatever seems most available. It is unlikely that such an effort, in the conditions likely to prevail after this war, would succeed as well as in the 1920s. The probable result would be a depression dwarfing that of 1932, and a regimentation of the economic order that would make the early days of the New Deal look like a Sunday school picnic.

It seems clear that the need for governmental direction will be no less following the war than during the struggle. Score one for the New Dealers. If the world economic order is to be organized, can be organized, it will have to be through the agency of government. Instead of erecting insuperable trade barriers in the vain attempt to block off each national market to itself, the only sensible thing is to set up international commodity controls to regularize the markets till something like normal conditions can be restored. This, of course, if it is to succeed in doing anything except pile up carrying charges, must be backed up by steps to create new industrial demands, to balance supplies and requirements.

So the outlines of the "international new deal" would include commodity pools and production controls of some sort, financial organizations to promote development of new industries (such as contemplated by the Inter-American Development Commisison and Export-Import Bonk for Latin America), and probably something in the transport field—aviation, at least, needs to be placed under international control, owing to its potential menace in the hands of any aggressor, if for no other reason. Some form of international cooperation will be required in these projects to create confidence, and social control will obviously be requisite to afford some prospect that socially desirable aims will be pursued.

Isolationists oppose intervention in world affairs on the ground that it will mean the end of "the American way." Assuredly it will mean that we shall be deprived of the leadership of those financial and industrial magnates who led the country astray from 1919 to 1929, then folded their hands and turned their eyes prayerfully toward Washington in 1932-'33. It will supplant some of "the hollow men" who defended isolationism so valiantly at Munich in 1938.

The real issue is not whether we shall have increased governmental direction of the national life. That is coming anyway. The question is whether we shall have a purely restrictive and repressive direction, to jam us and freeze us into a status quo we have long found almost intolerable; or whether we shall have a direction aimed at expansion and progress, offering some sort of chance for the use of our dammed-up energies and resources. Chances of any kind of advancement in the kind of world this war is going to leave in its wake do not appear too good, but if the United tSates adopts and advertises constructive policies, it will help to bring out constructive forces elsewhere.

The Post Impressionist

Fallen Idol

I remember a picture from long ago childhood. I think it was on the school room wall but of that I cannot be certain; the picture stands out now devoid of the wall background. It doesn't matter anyway; what really matters is the picture, with stern old Barbara Fritchie leaning far out over her attic window ledge with her Union flag, looking down on the "famished rebel horde" marching into Frederick "in the cool September morn."

Under the picture was the stirring quotation:

"'Shoot if you must this old gray head
But spare your country's flag,' she said."

Looking at Dame Fritchie there in the window, you never doubted for an instant that she said just that. Her features were grim yet there was in them the fascination of terrible earnestness. She made you tremble and thrill at the same time. You felt that here was a strong woman, willing to die if need be for the principles of her cause.

And now they say it isn't so, that Gen. Jackson didn't even pass the Fritchie house that "cool September morn" in 1862, and, even supposing he did, that Barbara, 96 years old at the time, was bedridden. Some say the incident happened substantially as reported in Whittier's poem—only not between Barbara and Gen. Jackson, but between Barbara's neighbor, Mrs. Mary Cantrell, and one of the Confederate staff officers, Gen. Hill.

Whittier himself suggested that several incidents may have been combined in the report on which he based his poem, but stated that he had faithfully followed the account as it came to him.

The whole controversy reverberates with rumors, conflicting, inaccurate, exaggerated, as rumors always are. The "rebel horde," or according to the historical account, the Confederate troops, marched into Frederick in September. On that point there is complete agreement. Whether this was on a "cool September morn" is open to question, but maybe we should grant Whittier that little crumb of credulity. There are so many other points for disagreement.

Exactly what happened as the Confederate troops marched in and out of the city is a rich field for controversial speculation. Since it isn't marked off with a "No Trespassing" sign, I might as well wander about in its fascinating areas a bit as so many others have done before me.

The scene as I reconstruct it is one of great confusion; unwelcome troops marching in, the people looking on from the sidewalks and windows, a blur of action in which the details are lost, then departure of the troops. At this point the conflict in accounts begins. Little groups on street corners, in shops and in homes relive the days that have gone on swiftly into history.

"And did you see the Union flag waving there in Dame Fritchie's attic window to 'welcome' Gen. Jackson?"

"Ay, that I did and more too. That worthy dame shook her fist at the general—at the general, mind you—and shouted so you could hear her at least a block. 'Shoot,' she said, 'go on and shoot this old gray head but I dare you to desecrate the country's flag.' Those were her words and she looked like she meant 'em. The general was embarased—you could tell it by the way he reined in and looked up at Mrs. Fritchie. But very quick and gallant-like he ordered the soldiers to spare the lady—said any who disobeyed 'ud be shot down like a dog."

"Oh but it was Mrs. Cantrell and not Mrs. Fritchie who defied the general, and what's more it was Gen. Hill and not Gen. Jackson she defied. I saw it with my own eyes neighbor."

Then from a gaunt, solemn individual standing with his back to the stove: "Yes, I saw her too and a nobler sight never was. The way she stood her ground was past all believin.' Why I'm tellin' you when a soldier tore down the flag she had another up in less 'n no time."

"Right you may be about Mrs. Cantrell and Gen. Hill but as I live and breathe Mrs. Fritchie, old as she is and sick too as everybody knows, struggled to the window and waved the flag just as I said."

Then from the rear of the room: "Wait a minute—the troops detoured from the line of march. They didn't even pass either the Fritchie or the Cantrell house." (Frederick debunker, 1862 style.)

It was into this welter of contradictions that the newspaper reporter came for a story. Mrs. Cantrell refused to see them as her husband was away from home and she didn't know how to deal with such things. Mrs. Fritchie was a widow, old and ill, and too shaken to tell her story. An abundance of material for a warm, enlivening press account ended the ability of man to separate fact from fancy, maintain sequence and plausibility, and keep faith with the principles of reporting. The best that could be done was to construct an account based on contradictory fragments from miscellaneous sources, accepting whatever contributed to "story value" and discarding as irrelevant the conflicting elements.

It must have been a good story, and, when the Fredericklites saw it in the paper they probably agreed that it was so, regardless of what they had seen or had imagined they had seen, so great is the power of the printed word.

Mrs. Southworth, well known author then living in nearby Washington, D. C., liked the story, liked it so well that she clipped it from the paper and sent it to her friend, John G. Whittier. Mr. Whittier liked it too, and soon after wrote his brave lines about a brave heroine.

Then some one, I've no idea who, made a picture of Barbara in action. It hung on the wall and thrilled me when I was very young. The face in the picture had the compelling look of positive assertion. It would have seemed impious to entertain a moment's doubt of anything in the picture or in the poem.

And now they say it isn't so.

Today And Tomorrow

Toward A Clarification Of Our Russian Policy

LIPPMANN

THERE IS LITTLE evidence thus far that the White House and the State Department had thought out in advance the American policy in the event of a Nazi-Soviet war. They have been acting as if they had been caught unprepared and were now compelled to improvise. They should not have been caught unprepared. Though it was not certain until the weekend that the attack would be launched, though it was always possible until the very end that there would be another perfidious bargain instead of a war, there had been cumulative reports of several weeks about the massing of troops on both sides of the Russo-German frontier.

Long before these reports began to come from many parts of Europe, even before the Yugoslav campaign, information of a kind which could not be disregarded by those responsible for planning foreign policy had reached Washington that Hitler would attack Russia. And before this diplomatic information began to come in, there were the reports of the military intelligence about the extraordinary concentrations, not only of troops, but of aircraft in the eastern theater.

OVER AND ABOVE all the information available, there was the inexorable logic of the situation which enabled anyone to predict that Hitler must conquer Russia either before or after his attempt to settle accounts with Britain. There was room for doubt as to which campaign—the British or the Russian—would come first, and good reason for supposing that Stalin might find a way to appease Hitler so that Britain would be attacked first. But a diplomatic policy should have been planned and prepared for either of these eventualities just as the Army and Navy have plans ready for any military operation they may be called upon to make.

The effect of this diplomatic unpreparedness has been to present America's interest in the Russian problem in a false perspective, and in a confusing and, considering the President's remarks about shoes and socks for Russia, a trivial fashion. The man in the street, who unfortunately very rarely examines a map, was bound to ask himself excitedly whether the United States should now extend aid to Russia on an equal footing with Britain and China. But there was no reason why the Administration should have solemnly fallen into this confusion and then have emerged with nothing better than a collection of rhetorical threats and rhetorical promises.

THE RUSSIAN situation has been presented falsely to the American people because, under the influence of the headlines, it has been made to appear as if we had to decide whether to send planes and tanks to Stalin in his war with Hitler in European Russia. There was no need to decide that question because we cannot transport anything to European Russia if we wanted to or if we had any munitions that were not much more urgently needed elsewhere. It was one thing for Great Britain to enter into military engagements with Russia since, apart from the general question of making the Nazis pay for their invasion, Soviet Russia and Britain are in contact throughout the Middle East from Turkey to India and practical cooperation is of great importance to both of them.

But for the United States the situation is quite different. We have no contact of any kind with European Russia and no conceivable way of intervening directly in the Russian campaign. Obviously it is true that our vital interests will be immensely fortified if the Russians can manage to repulse the Nazis or even to make them pay a heavy price not only in materials but in time. But there is one and only one practical way of our doing anything to make Hitler's task more difficult. That is to speed up our deliveries to Great Britain. There is not a merchant ship, plane, or tank we can make available which can be of any effect whatever except in British hands. Therefore, as regards the war in European Russia, it is misleading and confusing to talk as if we could decide, and therefore had to decide, whether we wanted to help Stalin. When nothing can be done practically about a question, what point is there in precipitating an emotionalized debate about it?

A CLEAR REALIZATION that we are not involved and cannot intervene in European Russia should then open our eyes to the fact that we are inevitably involved and must be greatly concerned with what happens in Asiatic Russia. We must never forget that in Alaska we very nearly touch Russian territory, and that Kamchatka in Russian Siberia is very close indeed to the Aleutian Islands. If anyone is inclined to think that what goes on in Siberia is of no concern to us, let him remember that until 1867 Alaska belonged to Russia, that Alaska was discovered by a Russian expedition from Siberia, that Sitka and Kodiak were founded by the Russian-American Co., and that President Monroe's Declaration in 1823 was concerned not only with Latin America but also with a threatened Russian advance down the Pacific Coast.

What goes on in Eastern Siberia is therefore of great interest to us. It is of very great importance to the United States that Eastern Siberia where it faces Alaska should not be held by a Nazified Russian state or by Japan. We can do with Soviet Russia as a near neighbor in that part of the world because Russia has no navy and no prospect of getting one, and Soviet Russia's idealogical war against us is not conducted from any base in Eastern Siberia. But the control of this territory by the Nazis or the Japanese, or by the two combined, would make immensely more difficult the defense of Alaska and the control of the Northern Pacific Ocean.

AS A RESULT of the war in European Russia the future of Siberia has become an immediate question. The collapse of Stalin and the rise of a Nazi-controlled regime would raise the question; a Japanese occupation of Eastern Siberia, either in agreement with Hitler or to forestall him, would raise the question. Therefore, it is very much our interest that whatever happens in European Russia, there shall not be a collapse or a capitulation in Siberia.

We are able to help Russia effectively by our naval and economic power in the Pacific to maintain her position in Siberia. It should, therefore, be our policy to urge Japan and Russia to be faithful to their treaty and to maintain the status quo in Siberia, and we should use the weight of our influence both to assist the Russians and to persuade or induce the Japanese. This is the place where the United States should make a diplomatic intervention of the most powerful kind—an intervention to keep the Japanese and Russians from fighting, to bring them together, and eventually to work from there toward a Chinese-Russian-Japanese-British-Dutch-American settlement in the Far East.

Hill Faces Night Work

By Cecil B. Dickson
International News Service Staff Writer

Tremendous Backlog

Congress last night faced a tremendous backlog of legislation vital to national defense that must be enacted before the fiscal year falls on June 30.

With but four legislative days in which to stamp final approval on the $10,000,000,000 Army bill, the $1,300,000,000 Agriculture supply measure and President Roosevelt's power to devalue the dollar, among others, both branches face the prospect of night sessions Saturday and Monday.

Delay of the plan to exempt from the draft all men over 26 years old as of July 1, also is threatened, while thousands of employes in a dozen Federal agencies, including WPA relievers and Congressmen themselves, are confronted by the possibility of losing several days' pay.

The situation suddenly dawned on Democratic Congressional leaders when their program was disrupted by the death of Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, which caused the Senate to suspend business until Friday this week....

May Convene July 4

Some members are rueing the long weekend recesses they have taken during the session as they face the legislative logjam and others expressed fear that they may have to be in session on Independence Day, July 4, when they planned to return home for their usual patriotic and political speeches to their constituents.

Besides the Army and agriculture supply bills, Congress has yet to complete action on the $890,000,000 WPA relief measure, the $25,000,000 legislative bill, which carries pay for Congressmen, the $800,000,000 bill for Federal Security and Labor Department agencies and the bill to pay expenses of the District of Columbia in the year beginning July 1.

A $40,000,000 Tennessee Valley Authority measure and a $1,000,000,000 Commodity Credit Corporation Bill, to be considered today, are far from final enactment. The deficiency bill boosts to a record of $35,000,000,000 the amount of money bills slated for enactment before Monday.

Democratic leaders plan to jam through the Senate Friday, a bill to continue for two years the $2,000,000,000 currency stabilization fund and the President's power to devalue the dollar, which lapses at midnight Monday. The House already has approved it.

Recess Plans Delayed

But the Federal Reserve Board's bill to continue authority to issue currency against direct Government obligations after June 30 is certain to lapse because leaders have been unable to find any place for it on the crowded calendar.

Because of the jam, Speaker Rayburn announced that any plans for recessing Congress would have to be delayed indefinitely. He announced the $3,500,000,000 defense tax bill would not be ready for House action until July 15.

Democratic leaders have been advised the Administration is considering price control legislation and that within a few weeks will submit a new lease-lend program of between $8,000,000,000 and $7,000,000,000, and will insist upon early passage of the so-called "property seizure" measure. Later, a new bill to revise the social security laws boosting old-age pensions and to include many workers not now receiving benefits is to be submitted.

Thus, it appears Congress, although it has broken all previous spending records, faces a long and hot summer session.

German School In Shanghai Is Vandalized

By Douglas Robertson
Copyright by New York Times

Shanghai, June 25.—The first direct partisanship in the European war occurred in Shanghai recently when gateways and walls of the German controlled and maintained Kaiser Wilhelm School were placarded with red painted signs reading "Down with Hitler," and also with pictures of the Soviet hammer and sickle. At present there are no clews as to who painted the signs, but international settlement and French concession authorities are investigating and maintaining the strictest watch that national sentiments will not become a danger to Shanghai's foreign areas.

Since the outbreak of the European war Shanghai's varied national inhabitants have moved strictly within their own circles. Propaganda agencies, including English, French and Italian newspapers and radio stations daily and nightly proclaim their successes and plead their causes. Various nationalistic organizations have been formed to gather contributions, institute entertainments, raise money, knit and sew and collect practically anything and everything for shipment to Europe for their embattled national forces.

Although Shanghai has been called the city of clubs, there is little friction between nationals whose countries are now facing each other across the battlefields. The world-renowned Shanghai Club politely requested two German members, who joined only for official reasons, being members of the German consulate general, to "refrain from using club privileges." The request was followed immediately by the Germans' resignations.

Similar action has been taken in other clubs in which one or another nationality is dominant. Throughout, however, the different nationalities on meeting have maintained the most frosty politeness and silence, which, although disrupting numerous friendships, has averted acrimonious discussions.

Authorities declare the recent action here of placarding the German school was lamentable and will not be tolerated in future.

Negro Workers

By Glen Levin Swiggett

Latin-American Suspicions

THE PRESIDENT'S REQUEST to industry through the Office of Production Management that there be no discrimination in defense industries against Negro workers will probably do more to win Latin-American labor's support for his continental preparedness program than the various meetings of diplomatic representatives since the Lima Conference of December, 1938. It should help soften Latin-American labor's dislike of armed intervention in labor strikes, as well as strengthen labor's slipping belief in our Government's continental defense measures.

If so, the significance of the President's message inheres less as a measure for more effective home defense than as an indication, equally needful, of a more sympathetic social attitude on the part of our Government. Therefore, if received by Latin-American labor without reservation, and taken at the tide, this home-defense measure may become the means of allaying labor's suspicions of imperialistic designs in our present Pan American promotive efforts.

THE POLITICAL IMPLICATION of Pan Americanism is equality of treatment. To Latin Americans in general, social equality is implied. Until the recent denial of citizenship to children of non-Spanish-speaking Panaman Negroes, born after November 8, 1903, there has been no significant discrimination against Negroes by a Latin-American government since the conflict, a century ago, between the blacks and protected whites of Santo Domingo.

Our Government has not always been able to give favorable consideration to the social bases upon which Pan Americanism, as Latin-Americans understand it, must rest and to this condition is partly due the fact that dependable Pan Americanism has been slow to develop. In the making of our Nation and in the building of our national economy, certain divisive social attitudes toward non-white races at home has created prejudice against, or prevented recognition of, values in Latin Americans as a people, four-fifths of whom stem from Indian or Negro races.

AFTER THREE CENTURIES of Spanish colonial control, the mestizo made up less than 40 per cent of the population of Mexico; today he constitutes 70 per cent. In Brazil the Negro is the basic stock. Due to this fact, geographically, the Negro is the largest racial bloc in Latin America, including most of the Caribbean countries. Extending down the West Coast, from Mexico to Bolivia-Peru, is the Indian bloc, the second. The white block is the smallest in extent and population.

From Bolivar to Batista, from Placido and Goncalvez Dias to Ruben Dario and Cruz e Souza, called by a Brazilian literary historian the greatest lyric poet of his country, men born to rule by sword or pen have sprung from this new-forming "raza cosmica," to merge imperceptibly into the traditional Ibero-American cultural pattern.

The Latin-American peoples honor these men. Although fixed within frontiers by the spirit of nationalism, the poets, if not the politicians, are not insensible to these common race ties. Negro or Indian, through which they sense some kind of union, even political. This feeling, doubtless, inspires efforts, century old, for a Central American Union and a Caribbean Confederation, the bases of which were laid down before the Spanish-American War by great Caribbean intellectuals like Hostos, the educator; Marti, the poet-soldier; Betances, physician in exile, affectionately known as "El Antillano," and Henriquez Carvajal, statesman and father of Max and Pedro, than whom no living Latin-Americans have, perhaps, greater cultural influence today in Spanish America.

THE CARIBBEAN CONFEDERATION is the cultural type of union to which popular groups in Latin America aspire even today; facing, as labor seems to realize, fascist assault from within, if not aggression from abroad.

Out of a similar situation, at the beginning of the century, came the attack upon Yankee imperialism by the Rodo-Ugarte-Palacios South American intellectuals to whom Pan Americanism meant capitalistic imperialism, while the mission of Spanish Americanism was for spiritual conquest.

Then, as now, the same fear was expressed, and not by irresponsible persons speaking without authority. The neutrality of Argentina and Mexico in the World War of 1914 may have partial explanation in this suspicion of the United States. Since then our government has traveled fast and far in dispelling this suspicion of political conquest.

The President of Mexico has recently denied, publicly, ground for this suspicion. It has just been announced in the press that Acting President Ramon S. Costillo, of Argentina, will appoint, in the interest of continental solidarity, a visiting mission to the United States, the head of which will probably be the chief of the Radical Party, responsible for Argentina's refusal to go along with the United States in the first World War. But today this fear is not political; it is economic, and the suspicion comes from labor.

LOMBARDO TOLEDANO, secretary general of the Latin-American Federation of Labor, can doubtless speak for organized labor, at least in Cuba and Colombia, Argentina and Chile, as well as in Mexico. In a notable address to labor, printed in full in El Universal, June 8, he states labor's position with respect to cooperation now for defense and, later, for a more permanent type of continental union, born of better popular understanding, and not the creation of chancelleries.

Labor's objective, he says, means now the maintenance of sovereignty and peace at home, in fulfillment of labor's aims expressed by the Mexican revolution; and cooperation now, under the principle of self-determination, in the establishment of democratic governments in the Western Hemisphere and, at the end of the War, in creating a world-wide democratic regime.

Plainly, labor's aim is, first, the building of an impregnable national economy for each Latin-American country; to be followed by the building, through labor's cooperative efforts, of some kind of a continental and, eventually, international union of free democratic peoples, patriotically committed to democratic ideals. The United States must not become again, he says, at the conclusion of this War, Latin America's one buyer-creditor-seller nation, as it was in 1918.

THE IMPLICATIONS of this type of union may seem dangerous to some readers. That depends whether it will be used to further national, continental or international ends. The charge of communism of the Stalin stripe is repeatedly brought against the Lombardo Toledano federation. Labor is divided in Mexico on this very issue. The Stalin-Trotsky controversy has had a small-stage setting in Mexico, foremost painters leading opposition camps with fatal results. This division, doubtless, is due to personal reasons. Attacks upon Lombardo's federation by former associates suggest this possibility.

But the fact that President Avila Camacho selected Lombardo Toledano as the channel through which to address Pan American labor shows the strength of Lombardo T. in Mexico and before Latin American labor.

For the present, therefore, understandings, if not agreements, of mutual advantage to our Government's continental defense plans and to union objectives that Lombardo Toledano has in mind are of the highest importance. In view of the racial make-up of the Latin-American labor organizations, no more helpful gesture to this end from the United States could be made at this time than that of President Roosevelt in his request for nondiscrimination against Negro workers in defense industries.

Elmer And Luke

"Down with Communism!" barked Elmer Twitchell, who had been too ill for a couple of days to read the newspapers.

"So you're that kind of a man!" sneered his brother, Luke.

"Whaddaya mean 'that kind of a man?'" demanded Elmer. "Toss the Reds into the hoosegow! The Comintern must go!"

"So you're one of them subversive elements, eh?" exclaimed Luke. "I'm ashamed of you standing there denouncing our ally, Joe Stalin."

"Am I nuts or are you?" barked Elmer.

"Maybe both of us are," admitted Luke, "but anyhow I read the papers oftener. I can't imagine a man like you being so far behind the news that you ain't a warm friend of Russia."

"Bah! Russia, the slimy accomplice of Nazi Germany! Russia, the pal of the swastika gangsters in the fight to destroy civilization! Russia, the buddy of Adolf Hitler. Bah!"

"Not any more, mister," corrected Luke. "It's Russia, the victim of treacherous aggression, Russia the betrayed sovereign state, Russia, the victim of a predatory attack by a stabber-in-the-backer. It's even Joe Stalin, the pal of the democracies!"

"Tell me all," insisted Elmer. "I missed a few editions lately."

"Germany has attacked Russia," explained Luke. "Hitler is fighting Stalin as a thief, a cheat and a double crosser, if you will pardon my laughing. And Stalin is declaring a fight to the finish against Adolf as a perfidious schemer, a breaker of agreements and a dirty crook. I think he also says Adolf's word is no good."

"Hooray for Soviet Russia! Three cheers for the Comintern! And a tiger for Josef Stalin!" screamed Mr. Twitchell, ever the emotional type. "Forward with Molotov! Or am I a little mixed up?"

"If you know anybody who ain't mixed up lemme know," said Luke. "The more mixed up you are in this war the better chance you got of being right."

"But it's all so embarrassing," complained Mr. Twitchell. "I had two appointments today with committees for the suppression of Communistic influences, and I was also at work on a paper entitled 'Stalin, the Arch Double Crosser.'"

"Well, you're Josef's buddy now," declared Luke, always a realist. "There's no way out. Even Churchill had to weaken. This is no time for logic, sentiment or previous notions. We gotta face facts."

"But it looks a little curious seeing Poland, Holland, Belgium, England, Greece and you and me all slapping Joe on the back now and telling him we are with him till hell freezes over," sighed Elmer.

"And maybe we ain't seen nuthin yet," said Luke. "I wouldn't be surprised if we had to cheer Matsuoka any minute and maybe start sending messages of hope to Mussolini. I bet Benito is thinking he may have to line up with the democracies any day now."

"How about the Turks?" asked Elmer.

"We don't have to worry about the Turks for some time. They got so many treaties with so many people on so many subjects they won't even be out of the unreliable parchments before winter," said Luke.

"Let's go get a cupper Vodka, comrade," said Elmer.

"Okay, commissar," agreed Luke.

"Let us strike with united strength while life and power remain," concluded Mr. Churchill Sunday and it was a little staggering to hear coming out of the mike over the same station in the next breath "Strike two on Lavagetto, No score yet."

"To all this I remained silent because I had to . . . Still, I had to be silent . . . I nevertheless still believed it best to remain silent . . . I remained silent on this matter, also . . . Condemned to months of long silence, etc. . . ."—From Adolf Hitler's explanation to the German people of his attack on Russia.

He just got tired of hearing pins drop.

The Situation In Minneapolis

A VERY DANGEROUS situation exists in Minneapolis, where Denny Lewis, chairman of the C. I. O. Construction Workers and a brother of "Wrong" John Lewis, of the C. I. O. Mine Workers, has welcomed into his organization the Trotsky revolutionary group formerly known as Local 544, of the A. F. of L. Teamsters. This union has a history of violence, and it is known that during Leon Trotsky's life in Mexico emissaries went there to confer with him. Dan Tobin, the international president of the A. F. of L. Teamsters, can help to expose the revolutionary character of the union, for he had trouble with this cell for years. He was about to expel Local 544 from his international on patriotic grounds when, suddenly last week, No. 544 withdrew.

The prompt issuance of C. I. O. charter to 544 in the face of the known and notorious anti-American connections of its leadership will have to be regarded as proof of the futility of hoping that the C. I. O. will voluntarily dissociate itself from groups which are enemies of the American Nation and its people. On the contrary, the C. I. O. welcomes them.

THE PECULIAR power of a teamsters' union to strangle a community and slaughter people, if that be the union's purpose, may need some explanation. Even in Pittsburgh, where the teamsters are still in Tobin's A. F. of L. and pursuing the even tenor of their lawless way, American citizens drive certain trucks at risk of their lives and property. Men have been waylaid on the highways and beaten, and opportunities have not been neglected for secret sabotage by which wrecks may be caused on their highways. Guerrilas, operating in a manner not unlike that of the horsemen who raided unprotected rural areas in the war between the States, have prowled the streets and roads around Pittsburgh, and the disposition of local officials in most communities organized by unions has been to withhold police protection and neglect prosecution.

The whole community, indeed the whole Nation, owns and pays for the roads, but the teamsters undertake to say who shall not use them except in peril of death or injury by attack or sabotage. The teamsters of Dan Tobin's union conquered Seattle by terrorism, and Dave Beck, the personal ambassador of Mr. Tobin, told me that he personally established a mob of his followers, locally known as gooms and elsewhere as thugs, around the plant of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer to win a strike for the Newspaper Guild as a personal favor to a friend. Neither he nor his teamsters had any interest in the guild or its strike, and, indeed, he later fought the guild. He just did this because he had the power to do it and without any regard for the merits of the dispute.

BUT TOBIN'S teamsters are committed to a policy and program of Americanism and against communism, whether of the Trotsky or the Stalin variety. Beck hates all Communists. The union bars them and indorses national defense, and confines its terrorism to those who resist its demands. The teamsters are fighting, or think they are fighting, for their union only.

That was why, after a long dispute, Mr. Tobin's big union had reached the point of expelling the Trotsky organization known as Local 544 in Minneapolis. Trotsky's kind of revolutionary communism prescribes the sudden assault and terror in unarmed, unprepared communities.

In commenting on the withdrawal of 544 Mr. Tobin referred to the fact, long known to the people of Minneapolis, that this group had organized squads of revolutionary street fighters whose missions on the day of the revolt may be conjured with reasonable prophecy by referring to the method by which Trotsky took power when he struck in St. Petersburg.

The police would be useless, the National Guard is away on Federal service, the home guards, if any, had one tragic experience some years ago, and the nerve centers of the local civilization could be seized in a few minutes—a fact which has occurred to the government of New York in its dealings with the Communists of the transport workers of the C. I. O. and with the German Bundists.

AS LONG AS 544 was seizing the political, economic and industrial control of Minneapolis by the tested and approved methods of Dave Beck, Mr. Tobin's international hand no objection. Indeed, there is no ground for believing that the teamsters would object now to the ruination of small operators and the gradual assumption of the whole political and economic control. It was only when, at last, the patriotic issue required action against the Trotsky local that the Tobin union finally and reluctantly reached a decision to revoke 544's charter.

For that much credit may be given Mr. Tobin and the international. They are pro-American, although they think themselves qualified and entitled to govern the United States by Adolf Hitler's method of control and terror. But 544 was a cell of the Leon Trotsky conspiracy of bloody revolution against the very form of the American Republic and that was why the teamsters decided to kick them out and why the C. I. O. cordially took them in.

Do you think I am an alarmist? If so, ask some friend in Minneapolis.

Laborite Says Attack On Russia Probably Will Avert British Defeat

Copyright by New York Times

New York, June 25.—The Nazi attack on Russia will probably save Great Britain from defeat, Col. Josiah C. Wedgwood, British Parliament member, declared today, predicting that Russia, "unlike other driven people," will be able to fight guerilla warfare behind the lines and successfully hold out against the invaders.

The dean of the British Labor Party told 75 members of the British Empire Chamber of Commerce in the United States that the greatest joy of his life was to hear of the invasion of Russia. "I hope that this will bring Russia nearer to our way of thought, to some form of democratic freedom," he said.

Predicting that the next peace treaty will be drawn up, "not in Versailles, but in Washington," he asserted that England is through with the responsibility of solving the problems of Europe, which she has done for the past 300 years. "We've had enough of it. It's time we pass on the baby to the Americans."

The war is doing England "a great deal of good," however, commented the speaker, who is on an "unofficial" lecture tour of American. He explained that Englishmen were now acquiring "the sound Christian virtues, badly needed before the war," of self-respect, self-sacrifice and community feeling.

Hitler Beats Napoleon's Time By Day In Attacking Russia

"Hitler, declaring war on Russia on June 21, was barely one calendar jump ahead of Napoleon," points out a bulletin from the National Geographic Society. "Bonaparte made his war declaration on Russia on June 22, 1812. For his campaign—mainly pedestrian—he found that date too late in the season for full conquest before the severe Russian winter snowed under his victory hopes.

"Like Hitler, Napoleon had concluded a friendship pact with Russia before the invasion (the Peace of Tilsit, in 1807). Napoleon's lasted for nearly five years, Hitler's less than two.

"Starting out from German territory, two days after the declaration of war, Napoleon led more than 400,000 men across the Russian frontier along Lithuania's Nemunas River. After he passed the first Cossack guard at the border the Russians offered no opposition to the first 300 miles of his advance. But the timetable of Napoleon's progress was geared to ambling cavalry and infantry, with lumbering supply wagons holding them back, since neither railways, paved roads, motor-driven vehicles, nor airplanes were then in existence to speed the transport of troops and supplies. With relatively little fighting, it took Napoleon 13 weeks to reach Moscow and capture the capital of the country he was not to conquer. On September 15 he moved into the abandoned Kremlin.

"Although he won the campaign, Bonaparte lost the peace. The wily Russians prolonged the negotiations until the first frost, six weeks later, caught the invaders without provisions or peace terms deep in hostile territory. It took the French forces almost ten weeks to fight their way out on the disastrous retreat from Moscow. Napoleon deserted them before all had staggered out of Russia, and hurried toward France in a carriage mounted on a sleigh. The Moscow venture cost him 300,000 men and set him on the path to Elba."

Burned 13 times when battles raged around it, but rebuilt each time until it is now largely a modern city—that is the story of Kaunas, Lithuanian capital whose occupation by German forces has been reported.

Childlen's Outing

Jimmie McFarland had "a swell time" yesterday.

Jimmie, who is six years old, went to a picnic at Glen Echo Park. He laughed at Johnny Reh and his clown band when they put on a show for him. At noon, he took time out for five glasses of punch, four sandwiches and three pieces of cake. And he felt well enough afterwards to take in the amusements. Jimmie thought the merry-go-round and the airplanes were "swell."

Jimmie doesn't have any mother or father. He lives at St. Joseph's Home, 364 days a year. But yesterday was the very special day on which Washington Lodge No. 15, B. P. O. Elks had invitieid Jimmie and 600 other orphans out for a good time.

Nobody could have more than 45 drinks of punch, were the orders, because there was only 300 gallons. But Jimmie and his friends could have had as much of anything else as they wanted.

"Anything else" meant 2,400 sandwiches, 1,800 eggs, 800 slices of cake and 80 gallons of ice cream.

And while taffey apples were not officially listed on the menu, there were unmistakable red stains on many a snub-nosed youngster.

This is the twenty-ninth year that the Elks have taken the Washington orphans on their annual picnic. Strangely enough, it has never rained on Elks' picnic day. As one of the clowns said, "The Lord must look down on these kids."

But blonde, blue-eyed Jimmie McFarland doesn't know about big things like that. Jimmie doesn't know many words.

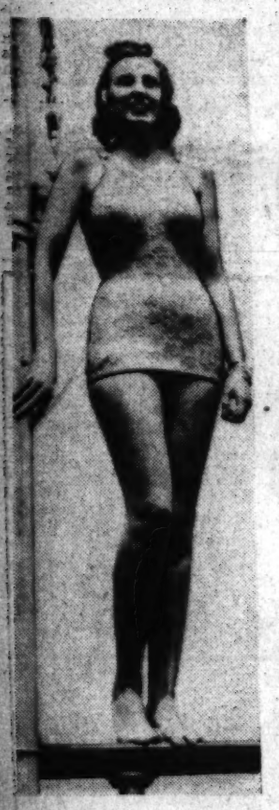
EATS GALORE—Children of the Swartzell Methodist Home get their share of everything

You Can't Buy a Duck, but You Can Buy a Llama and a Horse



Jessie Wilcox, 18-year-old blonde, has been named official hostess for the "Miss America" beauty pageant at Atlantic City, the Labor Day week of September. Miss Wilcox was sponsored by the Girl Scouts

Two horses and a llama are among articles to be auctioned at 10 a. m. today in the Procurement Division property yard, Second Street and Virginia Avenue Southwest.

The horses and the llama were donated by the Smithsonian Institution, where they have been collecting dust for more than 50 years. They are life sized, stuffed replicas which were used in animal group exhibits.

One, pure white with a flowing tail, would have made a beautiiful mount for Lady Godiva on her epic ride. The other, dark brown with a shaggy black mane, is less lovely.

Basil Swales, of Beltsville, Md., supervisor of the ward, yesterday was uncertain as to who would be interested in bidding for the horses and the llama. He ventured the opinion finally that perhaps one of them could be used outside of a saddle shop as a come-on for customers; a sort of wooden Indian, which wasn't a wooden Indian.

In one corner of the yard stood a grim reminder of war, an obsolete 53-inch aerial bomb. This was donated by the War Department.

Every branch of the Government is represented in the huge collection of junk. There are kneehole desks, swivel chairs and filing cabinets from every Government building.

Herman Klotz, 2925 Ordway Avenue Northwest, could work up little enthusiasm for the big sale. He is the man who will stand behind the hammer and get the customers to bid against each other. He said that these sales are "old stuff" to him, and that if necessary, he will be ready to "stand by" all day until they have covered every article in the yard.

Aside from the two horses and the llama, which will undobtedly "steal" the whole show this morning, there can be found innumerable items, ranging from a bathtub to a 1935 station wagon.

According to Swales, the sale will continue into the afternoon, and there will be "hundreds" of bidders on hand.

The Weather Bureau donated a large weather map of the United States, which brings up the question of today's weather. However, it is certain that whether it rains, or whether it shines, the big sale will carry on.

Bill Cunningham's Column: Ruth Vs. Cobb

By Bill Cunningham

Two of baseball's immortals, Babe Ruth and Ty Cobb, are meeting in a series of golf matches for charity, and it really is something big and historical. It's been in the making for at least 15 years, and I, for one, never expected to see it come to pass.

Superlatives are dangerous, comparisons odious, and all that sort of thing, but I guess it's pretty well conceded that the old Georgia Peach and the Big Bambino were the two greatest baseball players ever to wear the flannel spangles.

And if some pert oldster wants to rise to point of order and ask how about Pop Anson, King Kelly and some of those brilliant originals, we'll have to ask them to table the matter for St. Peter or somebody with an extra long look to adjudicate. So far as the game as we know it today goes, Cobb and Ruth are undoubtedly its most famous names.

TY COBB

Both, of course, have passed along as active performers, but each is full of health, vim and muscular vigor. Both are independently wealthy. Ruth spent terrifically in the years of his big earnings, and he was the biggest earner the game ever knew, his salary one year being $80,000, but he had the good sense to sock enough away in insurance, annuities and investments of that sort, so that today he has more than a comfortable income.

Cobb's Financial Story Remarkable

Cobb's financial story is even more remarkable. When he was a young fellow playing ball in Atlanta a friend said, "You're going to be making a little money and you haven't had any business experience. Why don't you turn your money over to me as you get it and let me invest it for you? There's a new company here making a soft drink and it looks pretty good. I'll put it all in there for you, and you might make yourself something."

"All right," said Cobb. "Sure. Go ahead. I wouldn't know what to do with any money except put it in the bank."

Well, that little company only turned out to be the Coca-Cola industry. Ty Cobb today is probably worth a couple of million dollars. He recently moved his legal residence from California to Nevada to save the minor matter of $20,000 a year in State income tax.

These two eldering gentlemen, having spent so many active afternoons physically, naturally had to have something to do with their time, so each took up golf. Each, as it chances, is a left-hander, and left-handers are supposed to be pretty funny at golf.

But Ruth and Cobb, two of the greatest hitters the game of baseball ever knew, went at the links game left-handed, and both play a respectable brand of it. Either is liable to break 80 at any time, and perhaps you have a vague idea of the power those two mighty sluggers pour into a drive!

Cobb, still remembered as the most aggressive, most belligerent ball player of them all, apparently still spends his time even now looking for a contest, and the bigger the better. He has never said it in so many words, but there's a real possibility that he's just a little zealous of his baseball record and just a little jealous of Ruth's more thundering fame.

Ruth came along a little after Ty, and although the critics still call Cobb the sharpest all-around ball player of them all, Babe, of course, became the most famous man of his time as the home run king. Ty, if he'd discuss the matter, would probably say he wished he'd had a rabbit ball instead of a potato to swing at, and so on and on.

The Georgian Fire-Eater

Cobb is the sort of gentleman who grants no opponent anything. He undoubtedly feels he can top anything his age and weight in any sort of test of athletic skill, including Babe Ruth at a duel with golf mallets. When he came on this spring to the Master's Tournament at Augusta, and the proposition of playing Ruth crept into some conversation, he wound up and threw a challenge at the Babe without further ado. He said he'd "travel anywhere to play him and would positively pin his ears back."

It was the fight of the Georgian that was always so remarkable, and which still is so remarkable. Every time the elder baseball writers fall to barbecuing a little verbal fat something about Ty invariably comes into the conversation.

The other day your agent heard Granny Rice tell of a time he and Cobb were sharing a room at the Detroit Athletic Club during some big event, and Nig Clarke, the old catcher, showed up without a room. Rice told the clerk to stick a cot in their quarters for the old backstopper and later the three veterans got to reminiscing.

"Nig," said Rice, "there never was anybody better than you at tagging that runner at the plate. Was there some special knack to it? You were the best I ever saw."

"To tell the truth," chuckled the old catcher, "I really didn't get nearly as many as I got credit for. I just worked up a knack of fooling the umpire. Take you, Ty," he said to the old fire-eating Georgian. "I'll bet they called you out 20 times at the plate when I didn't even touch you."

He got no further. Cobb went at him with an angry roar.

Coverette, Other Styles, Originated By U. S. Bureau Of Home Economics

By Martha Ellyn
Post Household Editor

WITH the men folk either off to camp or otherwise engaged in the interest of national defense, many women are finding there are jobs to be performed both indoors and outdoors for which they need special outfits.

Martha Ellyn.

The problem of finding help for many chores about the home is becoming especially acute in this city because of the great number of persons needed for Uncle Sam's more pressing tasks. Many of the great homes have been closed because of the help problem. And the smaller establishments present many work needs. Housecleaning, washing, tending chickens and gardening, all call for a simple, quick-to-put-on, cool, washable suit, cut full with freedom for action, comfort and practicability.

Free Action Style

Such a garment—really a coverette—has been designed by the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. It is a one-piece garment with a surplice closing. Just step in to it, pull it up, tie the sash ends and you are ready for work. For working in the garden or going up and down stairs or ladders, the legs of the suit can be buttoned around the ankles. This holds the fullness where it is needed for knee bends.

Besides these popular coverettes, other up-to-the-minute work clothing designs for the busy woman of today are being prepared. Divided skirt dresses, field suits, industrial work clothes, aprons, wet-weather suits—all designed to give a maximum service at a minimum of cost and to provide comfort and safety for the wearer.

Wet Weather Suit

For the women who are interested in a wet-weather suit made of shower-proof cotton that can stand any number of washings to meet the needs of those who work in the garden on wet, dewy mornings and who have other outdoor chores to do in rainy weather, the garment designed by the Bureau of Home Economics will be a joyful find. Coverall aprons, utility aprons with large pockets, divided skirt dresses or culottes and other utility garments have been given great thought in the designing done by this Bureau. The drawings on this page will give you an idea of their usefulness.

These garment drawings are currently being offered to commercial pattern companies for their construction and will probably be available soon. Inquiries concerning these garments should be addressed to the Textiles and Clothing Division, Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

A coverette suit, as at far left, assures freedom of action. The legs of the suit can be buttoned around the ankles, holding the fullness where it is needed for knee bends. The field suit (center, left) is a sturdy one whose slack legs are shaped in at ankles and closed with slide fastener to keep them from catching on objects or dragging in dirt. The shirt-jacket worn outside the trousers makes for coolness and comfort. Lower parts of sleeves may be snapped on for protection against sunburn or scratches. At center right is a simply designed, one-piece outfit with divided skirt, thus making no petticoat necessary. Even the strongest breezes will not blow the skirt around. The jumper slack suit (far right) may be worn with blouses. It is cooler than a suit made entirely of heavy work cotton

Rules for Using Skin Depilatares

There are many methods of removing superfluous hair on the legs, arms and body. Among them are waxes, erasers, minerals, depilatories and electrolysis. All are comparatively simple to use. Yet, the creams do require a little extra care. Here are a few suggestions for applying depilatories:

1. Follow the instructions on the label or in the package.
2. Look at the clock when you have finished applying the depilatory. Don't keep it on longer than directed.
3. Coarse hair takes longer than fine.
4. Make sure to rinse all of the depilatory from the skin.
5. Never use a depilatory twice on the same spot in a short period of time. If the first application isn't entirely successful the first time wait a few days before you repeat.
6. Never apply an antiperspirant directly after a depilatory. That also goes for all types of hair remover.
7. Be careful to keep woolen materials away from a chemical depilatory. Wool is hair, you know.
8. Don't apply a depilatory to an irritated, cut or abrased section—use it only on a normal skin.
9. If you've never used a chemical depilatory before, try a little on your arm first, just in case you might be allergic to one of the ingredients.
10. Do not rub the depilatory into the skin. Spread it over the area, making sure that all the hairs are covered.
11. Keep depilatories away from the eyes.

Mary Haworth's Mail

'Criticism Leveled at Others Is Often an Attack Which Applies More Aptly to Ourselves,' Wife Says, Quoting Menninger, in Discussing Human Frailty

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I have discussed the avalanche of letters precipitated by your advice of June 13, to a young man who asked how to rally from the heartsick depression induced by his fiancee's eleventh hour confession of an earlier, illicit love affair. Some of these letters indorse the charitable tone of your reply and others condemn that view as condoning debauchery. My husband and I believe that a few aspects of the subject have been overlooked, and hope that our comment may be of some value.

To begin, let's consider the psychology of those people who insist on keeping down, even kicking, one who has "fallen," who believe that once a woman has erred, she is necessarily immoral and incapable of being decent. Of such persons, Karl Menninger says (see, "The Human Mind," page 271), "Criticism leveled at others is often an attack which applies more aptly to ourselves, but which, rather than endure, we deflect toward some innocent person or toward some guilty goat who, because it is partly true, will suppose it had no other motive. 'Judge not, that ye be not (thereby) judged.'"

Having "fallen in love" is not in itself a secure foundation for marriage, although it can be, and often is, a fine cornerstone. The sensation of "falling in love" is often only the recognition of a strong physical attraction,— particularly with those who, because of their youth or inexperience or social isolation, are still unaware of the typical manifestations of sex attraction. Those who mistakenly consider that sex attraction alone affords sufficient basis for happy marriage often rue their wedding day; and those who succumb to its powerful lure before marriage often wreck their lives in so doing.

However, the fact of having given in to this force cannot justly be construed as grounds for totally condemning a woman. (This is not quite so true of a man, since he is generally the aggressor, and his sexual looseness has been acknowledged and condoned for centuries). Regardless of the circumstances of her mistake, a woman sufficiently intelligent to understand why it occurred, and sufficiently courageous to revise her behavior,—in the light of what it teaches her about human weakness,—can and does take profit from the experience, becoming in consequence a stronger person and more fitted for wifehood that than she was before.

Permanent Fusion of Lives Alone Justifies Intimacy

She will comprehend and act upon the realization (1) that physical intimacy is justified only by the fusion of two lives in marriage, and (2) that such fusion is impossible of achievement outside of marriage. In her marriage, she will neither exaggerate nor depreciate the importance of sex; will bring to the relationship all elements of cooperation essential to mutual contentment; and will realize, too, that she is primarily responsible for promoting the emotional success of the union.

This is not theoretical postulating on my part, but the result of much sober thought invested in my marriage. We eloped when very young. We had planned to be married in the conventional manner. But we made the immemorial mistake of allowing the physical urgency of love to control our actions, instead of maintaining a rational control of our emotions. When we learned we were going to have a child, we were married immediately.

The fact that I was not chaste when I married caused me to suffer intensely; partly because I was for a long time uncertain whether my husband's feeling for me was genuine love or a sensual counterfeit. This in itself was a terrible price to pay for incontinence. But worse yet was my realization of how I had destituted to the level of infatuation, a bond which may be elevated to life's most beautiful experience. Even today, when I am secure in my husband's love, the shadow of that deprivation still exists in my heart.

Our marriage is a success and we are both very happy. My husband has absolute trust in me (which is not misplaced) as I have in him,—and this trust is given voluntarily and completely, with no reservations. However, the fact that our marriage should be successful, from the standpoint of personal happiness, is a source of amazement to me. During our first years of marriage, we had many bitter quarrels, in which both of us said things we heartily repented shortly thereafter. Some were due to childishness (more often mine than his); some to differences which seemed, then, to be irreconcilable; and some grew out of what might be called "normal marital bickering." All were exaggerated by the fact that both of us had bad tempers and would not control them when denied our own way. Yet our love survived; and it still seems a miracle.

But the point I would make is this: Never, no matter how bitter the quarrel, how fundamental the difference, how blazing our anger, never did my husband even think to throw the past in my face. All my sins of omission and commission since marriage were hurled into our disputes, and I retorted in kind. But what I had done before marriage, and repented, never crossed his mind. When we married, we started with a clean slate. As we have grown up together and achieved happiness, I have done much thinking about how we did it and how it can be increased.

Ours Not to Judge but To Help Those We Love

I have reached the conclusion that it is a matter of attitude;—of realizing (and acting on the realization) that we have no right to judge; but rather the duty to help those we love who need our help. Only by living that kind of attitude can your correspondent "H. O." hope to find happiness with the girl whom he loves so much that he feels he cannot give her up;—because it is his only way of being as fine as he wants his wife to be.

His fiancee learned from her earlier mistake, bringing accured wisdom to their honorably conducted romance. Her courage and honesty in admitting her mistake, —in order to build her marriage on a foundation of truth,—shows clearly her innate gain. It also shows that she felt mentally in accord with her fiancee, believing he would accept her confession as proof of her essential integrity.

If I felt wise enough to dare to offer advice, in a case where so little is known of the persons concer ed, I might be tempted to suggest that the girl break the engagement—in view of the man's unfavorable reaction to her story. And yet again, such a move on her part might condemn the man never to know true forbearance; or, if he learned it, might deprive him of the incomparable experience of going through life with the woman he most loved, who opened his eyes to the beauty of tolerance. Their engagement, their plan to be married, and the fact that she felt he would understand, all imply the existence of a very special bond between them.

In conclusion I offer the hope that the man will rightly resolve his doubts and that, whatever course he elects, he will take care not to hurt the girl for putting her trust in him. She has been punished enough in conscience, by her belated realization of the eternal wisdom underlying society's insistence upon chastity and monogamy for women.

Lyre, Fiddle, Lute, Motifs For Design

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

Music hath charms—even in decoration. The lyre has from early times been a favorite motif for designers, and no wonder, for it is a superbly graceful form.

The Greeks adapted it and so did the Renaissance designers. In eighteenth century France and England and America it was used familiarly, and appeared often throughout the Empire period. Probably the most loved lyre design of all is the lyre back Duncan Phyfe chair. It was also used for table bases and sofa arms.

The flute, the lute, the harp and the violin have all been adapted for decorative designs. Lighting sconces, china and fabrics as well as furniture, traditionally use musical themes.

One of the loveliest chintzes we have seen in a long while we discovered the other day in the showroom of one of our favorite manufacturers. It used a violin as its central motif, entwined with a broad trimmed hat, cards and a gracefully looped drapery.

Fiddles in Design

The fiddle-back chair is another cherished furniture design that uses the violin form in its design. Numerous wall papers make use of both instruments and players.

Some of the most charming of the French earthenware that used to be imported in those dear dead days were the music plates—some with words and music of folk songs in the centers and illustrations of these songs on the shoulders — others with scenes from the operas for decoration.

Big overscale musical notes are often used as applique design for table mats and napkins and for curtains—especially in a musical household. Collections of little miniature musical figures are charming for a what-not or cupboard.

Fine old horns, trumpets, cornets and drums are adapted by decorators as lamp bases. As charming a coffee table as has been introduced in many a moon is a miniature model of a grand piano case, made coffee-table height.

Six Sheets to a Bed

All sheets in the wind . . . . that's a risky moment whether it refers to sailing or homemaking. Around the house, all sheets in the wind, or in the wash, doesn't leave anything on the shelf for emergencies. That's why those in the know advise a sheet quota of six sheets to each bed—two on the bed, two in the wash and two on the shelf "just in case."

Watch Poison Ivy at This Season, Redheads Especially Susceptible

By Ida Jean Kain

THE POISON ivy is lovely at this time of year—and as flourishing.

You may be one of the lucky ones, like the lady who plucked a spray for her lapel en route to a bridge party and who—except for the social ostracism—suffered no ill effects whatever.

But most people are not immune. If any member of your family has ever been stricken, you are not a good risk for the susceptibility can be inherited. It may be a relief to you to know that redheads are more susceptible to the poisoning than blondes or brunettes. But in any case, poison ivy is not something you walk into intentionally.

This is a wayward plant which is sometimes a shrub, sometimes a clinging vine. It rambles along the ground and climbs trees with equal facility.

Attractive Blossoms

During May and June it produces rather attractive clusters of waxy, greenish-yellow blossoms. And although the three famous leaves are usually notched along the edges, they may be deceptively smooth. The best rule for avoiding it derives from the old adage, "Leaves three, let it be!"

Since the oil contains the poison, merely strolling through the shrubbery may prove your undoing. When the leaves are bruised the oil comes off on your shoes and then when you take them off, you've got it.

Highly susceptible nature lovers can now resort to a serum. Also, a number of protective solutions and ointments have been evolved. The United States Public Health Service recommends a cream formula consisting of 10 per cent sodium perborate or 2 per cent potassium periodate mixed with vanishing cream. The cream should be rubbed thoroughly into the skin before a tramp into the woods. Afterwards it should be washed off with strong soap and water.

Another protective coating is suggested by the University of Chicago and consists in a 5 per cent solution of ferrous sulfate in half alcohol and half water.

Tannic Acid

But sometimes it is too late for prevention. The United States Public Health Service has found tannic acid an effective cure for the inflammation. The inflamed area is first cleansed with alcohol and then treated with a 10 per cent solution of tannic acid in water. If you have a severe case of poisoning, however, you will want to see your doctor and let him prescribe for you.

Proper Packing Will Make Travel Much Easier

Before you start packing for a trip, assemble everthing you plan to take. If you don't, you will find yourself walking around with a pair of golf shoes and no place to put them except on top of an organdy dance frock. Pack all the lumpy, bulky things like shoes, cosmetics, swimming accessories together and don't try to tuck them into little corners when you are finished.

And here's a warning from the National Association of Dyers and Cleaners, who say this is something their customers don't know: "Nail polish and nail polish remover are good things not to carry in luggage." Recently a customer came to them quite dismayed because a very nice dress and suit had hopelessly dissolved, cemented and welded together because polish remover leaked out of the bottle. The cleaner had to tell her that since both dress contained cellulose acetate, yes, the damage was beyond repair.

When you pack, be extravagant with those paper—put little wads in sleeves, under pleats and up all folds and creases with. As a final precaution, don't pack a bag until it's bursting out at the seams—it will ruin your clothes to say nothing of the case.

Clarence Hewes Entertains in Honor Of His Recently-Married Niece

Oliver Wendell Hammonds and Bride, Recently Returned From Mexico, Are Feted at Large Turnout of Capital Society

By Hope Ridings Miller

Take several dozen capitalites, add an attractive couple recently returned from a honeymoon in Mexico, a popular host, and a delicious teatime menu, and you have a pleasant party—such as the one Clarence Hewes gave yesterday in honor of his niece, Mrs. Oliver Wendell Hammonds, and her husband.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

Anyone with the idea that the capital social calendar is on the verge of closing out for the season would have changed his mind after one glance at the large company turning out for the event. From 5:30 o'clock until dinnertime guests were being ushered into the drawing room to greet Mr. Hewes guests of honor. Mrs. Hammonds, the former Ellen Hewes Flowerree, of New Orleans, was smartly attired in a floor-length jersey frock fashioned with a bright red skirt and a white blouse. A string of pearls and a corsage of gardenias further accented her costume. Many of those present yesterday were on hand several seasons ago when Ellen made her bow to Society at another party given by her uncle.

In the dining room guests gathered in large groups and went into ecstacies over the smoked turkey, the variety of dainty sandwiches and cakes. Virginia baked ham, rum punch and tea. On the outside terrace another group sipped orange juice and talked about a variety of subjects. Finland's declaration of war on Russia came up for discussion time and time again. Somebody mentioned that every turn of events made the international puzzle more complex than before. One guest observed that so-called experts seemed to be more baffled about the situation than anybody else. It seems that Joseph Davies, former envoy to the Soviet Union, made a speech at the University of Wisconsin Saturday night in which he said that war between Germany and Russia was most unlikely. Ten minutes later news of the war reached America. "Well, nobody can make any promises about what might happen in Europe," said Lothrop Stoddard, who is by way of being quite an authority himself.

Reflections in a tea cup: Several guests at yesterday's party wandered down to the lower terrace and took their seats, far from the madding crowd. Others returned to the throng in the dining room and lingered around so as not to miss a trick. At the table, which was decked with tiger lilies and tall candles, Mrs. Julian Chetwynd, of the British Embassy, poured punch, and Mrs. Powell Clayton served tea. Later Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck took over at the tea urn, and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling presided at the punch bowl.

New Orleans Visitor Holds Attention

Mrs. Bennett Clark and Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler took a seat on the terrace and were soon deep in talk. "Is this an 'America First' meeting," someone asked. It wasn't, Mrs. Wheeler said, but it well might be. The two had been discussing Mrs. Clark's speech last week in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and also plans for her talk in Philadelphia tomorrow night. Later this summer Mrs. Clark and her three sons expect to make a motor trip westward. Mrs. Wheeler, meanwhile, plans to stay right on in Washington all summer.

Very much a center of attention with younger guests at the party was Miss Sappho Winkler, of New Orleans, who is visiting Miss Marilynn Himes. Mrs. Sumner Welles was an early arrival yesterday as were Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt and Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman. Mrs. Thurman Arnold, wearing a snappy green and white print frock and a matching hat, was among those present. She said her husband would be along a bit later. Mr. and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt were there; also Miss Carolyn Nash and Mrs. Gilbert M. Hitchcock, who went on later to dinner at the French Embassy. Still later last night she left for Omaha, Neb., and from there she will go to Cape Cod to spend the remainder of the summer.

Miss Howry to Give Cocktail Party Today

J. L. Houghteling sampled the smoked turkey and pronounced it "delicious" . . . Miss Elizabeth Howry, who will entertain at a cocktail party this afternoon, said she would be off to New England early in July, but would return to Washington within a week, and would stay here until time for a late August trip to Mexico . . . Just back from Mexico, Miss Eleanor Flood said she had had the time of her life there.

Mme. Van Kaathoven sipped orange juice and talked with Edward Van Devanter. Merritt Swift was among those present, as were Dr. and Mrs. William Jennings Price and the latter's brother, Maj. Sanderson Detwiler. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem chatted with Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim and George Williams. Somebody mentioned that at 4:30 p. m. today a lot of Washingtonians will have their ears glued to the radio so as not to miss a word of a broadcast that will feature Evie Robert and Louise Atwill. I understand their subject is to take in Washington in general, and Washington society in particular. Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, smartly attired in a black ensemble, set off with a gardenia corsage, was congratulated right and left on recently having been made an honorary member of the "Beer and Skittles Club." "And what, for Heaven's sakes, is that?" someone asked.

First Picnic Set for Sunday

Well, it is an organized younger-set group bent on making the most of the sumemr around these parts. Purpose of the club is to negotiate a series of picnics, first of which will take place on Sunday at Wolf Trap, the Jouett Shouse farm in Virginia. Twenty-five couples comprised the active membership and there are several honorary members. Incndentally, the most recent party at Wolf Trap—that well-publicized "Have Fun" carnival—was one of the most sensationally successful benefits of the season and, as a result, about two $2,500 will soon be turned over to the Women's Institute of Professional Relations.

Official House Warming Held At Service Club

The Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, enlarged and remodeled, had its official housewarming yesterday, but scores of service men already have been sampling its expanded hospitality before a stream of Washingtonians took a look at it yesterday.

Mrs. Julian L. Schley, president, and other members of the Woman's Army and Navy League, owners and sponsors of the club, welcomed visitors to the service men's "home-away-from home" at 1015 L Street Northwest.

Flags were flying and musicians from the Navy Band played at the park across street, as visitors explored the club buildings. A number of officers and their wives were in the crowd.

A focal point of inspection, during the afternoon, was the old garage which has been turned into a recreation hall and dormitory. It has been named Chadwick Hall, since the largest single contribution in the club's remodeling program came from the estate of the late Mrs. Julia Chadwick, a member of the league.

The ground floor, used for the Wednesday and Saturday night dances, has been equipped with furniture bought with $800 donated by a group of men in a Western State. The chairman of the house committee, Mrs. Thomas Robins, wife of Brig. Gen. Robins, interested them in making the contribution.

The club, which formerly could take in 42 men overnight, now has a capacity of more than 200. In addition to the 115 beds, 100 emergency cots are available. On clear nights cots are sometimes put in the courtyard and on the porches. On a recent rainy night Ascension Church, in the neighborhood, opened its Sunday school rooms to take in 100 men who could not find lodging in the club, Mrs. Robins pointed out.

"The boys don't want canned entertainment," Mrs. Robins said. "They want to be let alone. They want to lounge in soft chairs, read, make friends with the other boys who drop in and dance with pretty girls at the parties on Wednesday and Saturday nights."

Testifying to the success of that type of program, dozens of grateful letters have come back to the club from boys who make it their headquarters while on leave, Mrs. Robins said.

"Mother" Emma Steed, hostess of the club, and her smile were on duty yesterday for the visitors, just as for the service men.

MRS. DONALD THOMAS SHEEHAN

In a garden ceremony, Miss Betty Young became the bride of Donald Thomas Sheehan yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, with the Rev. John Keating Cartwright officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Mehrer Young. Mr. Sheehan is the son of Mrs. Louise Coffey Sheehan, of Winsted, Conn. The wedding took place at the home of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Christian Heurich, jr., at 3400 Massachusetts Avenue. A trio of musicians, led by John Alden Finckel, played throughout the ceremony.

Bride's Sister Is Matron of Honor

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white chiffon gown fashioned along classical lines and ending in a train. A cluster of orange blossoms held her full length veil of illusion in place.

Mrs. Christian Heurich, jr., sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. She wore a blue chiffon frock with bishop sleeves, vee neckline and full skirt. Her bouquet was of yellow roses and blue delphinium and she wore a few flowers in her hair. The remaining attendants were the Misses Corinne and Carol Heurich. They wore pink chiffon gowns and carried pink roses and delphinium. Miss Connie Ann Heurich, 4-year-old neice of the bride, wore a pink frock.

Garden Party After Rites

Harold William Sheehan was best man and although there were no ushers the bridegroom had asked a few friends to assist. They included Dr. H. Arthur Grennan, Dr. Edward J. Slattery, Lieut. James P. Goode, U. S. A., and Christian Heurich, jr.

A reception followed in the garden. The bride's mother, who received with the young couple, wore a flowered print georgette and a leghorn hat. Mrs. Sheehan wore a pink crepe frock with white accessories.

B. P. W. Staff Is Entertained

New officers of the Business and Professional Women's Club and delegates to the national convention were honored yesterday at a tea by Mrs. Agnes Hogsett, member who recently moved here from Pittsburgh.

The receiving line was headed by the hostess, Mrs. Laura Waters, new president; Dr. Florence Armstrong retiring president, and Miss Carole Stupell, of New York and Boston, designer of table decorations. The party was given at 1205 Connecticut Avenue.

Three tea tables, arranged by Miss Stupell, were on display. Dr. Armstrong, chairman of the club's national defense committee, was asked to preside at the national defense table, with red and white satin striped cloth, and with a drum and sword for center decrations.

Miss Maria Carolina Padilla, secretary, Inter-American Commision for Women, Pan American Union, was invited to serve as hostess at the Pan American table. The centerpiece was a mass of miniature products from Latin American republics, with flags attached to each.

A group of social work leaders from Latin American countries were invited to the tea.

Mrs. Mary Catherine Lewis and Mrs. Caroline Stephens were joint hostesses at the career women's table, where symbols of transportation and communication were woven into the decorations.

Thoms to Receive For Son, Fiancee

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Thom have issued invitations for a reception on Monday afternoon at their home on Twenty-First Street. Guests of honor will be their son, Charles Richard Thom, and his prospective bride, Miss Dorothy Lee, of Port Jefferson, L. I., who will be married tomorrow on Long Island.

Mr. Thom is well known here, where he received his bachelor's and law degrees from George Washington University. He is now practicing law in Port Jefferson and is a second lieutenant in the New York Regiment of the United States Army Reserve Corps.

Mrs. Brill to Give Tea for Auxiliary

Mrs. Benjamin H. Brill, president of the local City of Hope Auxiliary of the Los Angeles Sanatorium, will give a membership tea at her home, 1303 Hamilton Street Northwest, from 2:30 to 5 p. m. tomorrow.

Miss Sylvia Neulander, Atlantic seaboard regional director, will make a talk on the work being done by the sanatorium.

For its local project the auxiliary has formed a milk fund to aid a group of underprivileged children in Washington. Mrs. Herman S. Hoffman and Mrs. Saul Sturman are promoting the project.

E Pluribus Unum Chapter Elects

Mrs. William H. Schreinert has been elected regent of the E Pluribus Unum Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, it was announced yestterday.

Other new officers are: Mrs. Virginia W. Sherman, vice regent; Mrs. Susan M. Curran, chaplain; Mrs. John W. Nesbitt, recording secretary; Mrs. Fulton R. Gordin, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Eugene Fugitt, treasurer; Miss Clara E. Brown, registrar; Mrs. Joseph H Curry, historian; Mrs. Carl H. Smith, delegate; Mrs. Harry C. Grove, Mrs. Elmer E. Curry, Miss Sara S. Whitcomb and Mrs. Contee S. Ficklen, alternates.

Capital Girls At Northfield Conference

In Northfield, Mass., to attend an annual religious conference are a number of Washington girls, including several from the post-debutante and the sub-deb contingents. Miss Mariana Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., and Miss Laura Blair, daughter of Mrs. Gist Blair, are there and will go on later to other points in New England to spend the remainder of the summer. Miss Evans will serve again as a counselor at Camp Hanoum and Miss Blair will join her mother at Bar Harbor, Me.

Among those at Northfield from the sub-deb group are Miss Hillis Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris; Miss Agnes Flather, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Flather; Miss Eileen Erwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin; Miss Betty Lee, daughter of Mrs. Clarence Aspinwall, and Miss Eugenia Merrill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill.

Miss Morris will return home after the close of the conference early in July and will be feted at a large party to be given by her grandmother, Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard, on July 5. The fete will take place at Mrs. Hubbard's Colonial home near Chestertown, Md. The past few days, Miss Morris has been attending a round of parties in Baltimore, and en route to Northfield Tuesday, she stopped over in Baltimore for the dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Machens. Incidentally, Miss Morris' post-deb sister, Miss Patricia Morris, received her degree recently from Vassar College and as a graduation gift from her parents, she is to have a trip to Peru. She will sail Saturday, returning to Washington in September.

Following her sojourn at Northfield, Miss Betty Lee will visit friends in Nonquitt, Mass., for two weeks and then she will return to Washington to join her mother and Mr. Aspinwall. Around July 20, the three will be off to Mexico City, where they will visit Mrs. Aspinwall's son, Blair Lee, 3d, who is with the United States Embassy staff there.

Miss Alma Garlick To Wed in Early July

Mrs. John Robert Garlick, of Rocky Mount, N. C., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Alma Harding Garlick, to Richard Edward Jones, son of Mrs. Virginia E. Jones, of Norfolk, Va. The wedding will take place in the chapel of Duke University, Durham, N. C., early in July.

The bride-elect and her mother formerly lived in Washington and Miss Garlick attended school here. Later, she was graduated from the State Teachers College, Farmville, Va., and then taught in the Culpeper High School. Mr. Jones attended the Virginia Polytechnic Institute. He is now with the Farm Security Administration in Culpeper.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

EARNESTNESS, which has never been considered particularly a debutante quality, marks this year's group of young things who will be presented to society. The war has pared the number to smaller than last season, but the contingent makes up in seriousness what it lacks in size.

Miss Margheritta Sterling, an attractive member of the new crop, says that the war is even more a topic of discussion among her friends than those perennial subjects, dates and parties. Ardent isolationists, as well as interventionists, flourish and the girls have just as bittter discussions as their parents. Knitting needles clack at luncheons as the Bundles for Britain contingent works furiously. Some of the girls have decided it's too sad a time to be making debuts. Others, like Miss Sterling, see no reason for not having at least one party.

INSTEAD OF sprawling on beaches, most of the girls are looking for summer jobs. Many forehandedly took the typing course offered at Holton Arms when they were seniors last year. "Mickey" Sterling has been tramping the streets in search of an opening. She took courses in social science at Sarah Lawrence College this year and is particularly interested in the work of the Alley Dwelling Authority. In her spare time this summer she will study typing.

"Mickey's" parents have already reserved the Larz Anderson house on Christmas afternoon for a tea dance in her honor. If the deb doesn't return to Sarah Lawrence, she will study at a Washington university. Incidentally, the debutantes all have their noses buried in "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

Guggenheims Give Gay Dinner Party On Their Yacht

The beautiful yacht Firenze, anchored off Eleventh Street, was the scene of a gay dinner party last night, when Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim were hosts. The Colonel and his pretty blonde wife will be off at daybreak on Saturday for a summer of cruising. They will make their headquarters at Sands Point, L. I., and plan to go up to Maine and also put in at Marblehead, Mass. Col. Guggenheim will not be working for the Air Corps after all—despite the reports widely circulated around town.

Guests last night included Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Wendell Hammonds and Miss Saffold Winckler, of New Orleans, who was a bridesmaid at their recent wedding. She has come up for a visit with another of the bridesmaids, Miss Marilynn Himes, of Frederick, Md.

Also at the dinner were Miss Mary Flowerree, of Baltimore, cousin of Mrs. Hammonds; Miss Natalia Aszkenazy, of the Polish Embassy; Lieut. Frederick Holman, of the British Air Mission, and Mrs. Holman; George Abell, John Brown and Roger Shafer.

HERE AND THERE: As counter action against the general slough of despond, Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., and Mrs. George Howe are planning a subscription dance for their friends on Saturday evening. It will be held at the Howes' home in Georgetown, and tickets, in keeping with the times, are modestly priced at $2. Several cocktail parties are being planned before the dance and guests have been told they may come in anything "from overalls to a shirt" . . . Frank West flew back to Stockton, Calif., yesterday, after a visit here with his mother, Mrs. Frank West. During his stay he had to explain to interested young ladies that his ranch out there was not the romantic cowboy kind, but the more prosaic lettuce-and-potatoes variety . . . B. Kleign Molekamp, Commercial Counselor of the Netherlands Legation, made a surprise trip to England in the same bomber which carried Ambassador Winant. Mme. Molekamp doesn't know when he'll be back. She leaves this weekend for Nantucket, where she has taken a house for the summer.

Marie Gartland Is Married To Mr. Schell

At a double-ring ceremony, followed by a nuptial mass yesterday morning in Holy Trinity Church, Miss Lillian Marie Gartland became the bride of William John Schell, jr. The Rev. Walter F. Cunningham officiated at 9 o'clock.

The former Miss Gartland is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Gartland. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Schell, of Boston.

Given in marriage by her father, Miss Gartland wore a gown of white lace and net, styled with a fitted bodice and full skirt which was draped into a train. From a tiara edged with pearls fell her fingertip veil of bridal illusion and she carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and baby's breath.

Mrs. Maurice J. Taggart, matron of honor for her sister, was gowned in yellow marquisette with a fitted bodice of lace and a matching shoulder-length veil sweeping from a tiara of rosebuds. Her bouquet was of yellow roses. Miss Mary Frances Geneste, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor, wearing aquamarine marquisette and lace, and carrying a bouquet similar to that of the matron of honor.

Maurice J. Taggart, half-brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and ushers were Donald J. Gartland, brother of the bride, and Charles J. Sullivan, brother-in-law of the bridegroom. Following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents and later the couple left on their wedding trip. Traveling, the bride wore a beige and London-tan ensemble, with matching accessories and an orchid corsage. Following their honeymoon trip, Mr. and Mrs. Schell will go to Boston to make their home.

300 Methodist Young Adults To Convene

More than 300 young adults from Methodist congregations in Maryland and the District will gather tomorrow at Western Maryland College, Westminster, for the opening of their second annual week-end summer assembly.

GRAHAM

Led by Walter Graham Washingtonian and director of young adult work for the Baltimore Conference, the delegates will discuss various phases of the challenging theme of "Being Christian in Such Days as These."

Following the opening fellowship dinner, the Rev. M. Leo Rippy will speak on "Christian Fellowship Today." He is director of the adult work department of the Methodist Church's Board of Education and author of a book, "The Church Working With Young Adults."

Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich, pastor of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, Washington, will address the banquet Saturday ninght on the subject of "The Seventh Dwarf," while earlier in that day the Rev. E. K. Emurian, of Ferrum (Va.) College, will speak on "Worship and Life."

Discussion and resource leaders will include the Rev. Mr. Rippy, Dr. John C. Millian, Baltimore Conference board of education executive secretary; the Rev. Wilber H. Wilson, associate pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Washington, and Mrs. Wilson; Mr. and Mrs. G. Allison Long, Fulton Stretton, Miss Sue Retallata, Miss Margaret Wallace, Grover L. Hartman, William Brown and others.

Mr. Graham, member of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, and guiding spirit behind the young adult work, was recently appointed for his third term as Conference director.

He is a graduate of Kentucky Wesleyan College and Yale University, is employed in the Comptroller General's Office. He is active in his own congregation and in Nation-wide Methodist work. The Baltimore Conference was the first conference in united Methodism to set up a complete program for young adults—the 24 to 40-year-old group. For many years, it is said, churches failed to provide adequate facilities for that age group.

German Boy Amazed; Wild West Isn't Wild

San Antonio, Tex. (U.P.).—Herbert Spiro was a little disappointed when he came to the United States from Germany. But he wasn't disappointed so much with the United States as a whole as he was at Texas.

"The first thing I expected to see in Texas was a whole flock of Wild West heroes and Indians," he says. "You see, that's what we believed in Germany about Texas."

The 15-year-old Hamburg, Germany, boy said that Nazi youths accept most Western fiction as fact. One German, he said, had grown quite popular as the author of 60 books dealing with Wild West heroes and Indians, with Texas as a locale.

Missionary Survivor Had Premonition of Zamzam Fate

Miss Mary Beam Seeks To Return to Africa Despite Experiences

Miss Mary S. Beam, an American missionary bound for the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, went to her cabin on the Egyptian steamer Zamzam the night of April with "a feeling that something was going to happen."

Something did.

At 5 a. m. the following morning Miss Beam woke to feel the ship shuddering beneath her as shells from the German raider, Tamisis, crashed into the Zamzam's hold.

She told about the experience and the harrowing trip that followed yesterday at the apartment of friends in Woodley Park Towers.

She came back to this country aboard the American Export liner Exeter, landing in New York two days ago. Unafraid, she is now trying to obtain State Department permission to sail for Africa once more.

Recalling the shelling of the Zamzam and its aftermath, Miss Beam said she hurried on deck in her night clothes and "the first thing I saw was two great red flashes" and two geysers of water shot up just overside. Then, as shells hit below the cargo line, the ship started listing. There were more hits. I don't know how many, in the hull and in the superstructure and upper decks."

Because two life boats were destroyed by shells, the four able to float were overloaded and two of these soon went under. Miss Beam was in one of the latter. Wearing a life belt, she floated about until she and others thrown into the water were able to catch hold of a raft. From this they were finally picked up by a motorboat sent out from the Tamisis.

MARY BEAM

Hustled Into Hold

Aboard the raider, they were hustled down into a three-decks-below roo min the hold, which Miss Beam said had obviously been prepared in advance for the purpose. In the center of the room were tables where the survivors were to take thei meals. Ranged along two sides were 120 beds. The amzam passengers were ushered into the room, the women assigned to the beds on one side of the room, the men those on the other. Their lifebelts werre taken away and, as they found later, the door was locked behind them.

Not for seven hours were the refugees given anything to east, and then only one bowl of soup apiece. The next meal, at a somewhat like interval, was one bowl of cereal.

The most harrowing part of the Zamzam experience for Miss Beam came at midnight. The alarm siren shrieked suddenly and the refugees immediately rushed to the door to climb to the decks, retrieve their life belts and, if necessary, take to lifeboats again.

The door was securely locked. A man, looking through a glass aperture in the door, saw German sailors rushing by in life belts. He yelled to a guard who told him merely another ship had been sighted and there was danger. The imprisoned survivors would be allowed out eventually if it became necessary to abandon ship, he said.

The craft proved to be a German merchant ship, Dresden, to which the Zamzam passengers were transferred the next day. The trip aboard this craft was another ordeal, Miss Beam said.

Germans Lied, She Says

"The whole trip was a series of lies, as far as the German officials were concerned. They kept telling us they would put us off at a neutral port, in South America perhaps. That didn't happen. Then it was a neutral ship, and so on."

"Finally, we docked at St. Jean de Luz, in France. There the English were separated from the Americans. The American consul arranged for our transit through Spain to Lisbon, where we sailed for home. The English, we learned later, were taken to Bordeaux and thrown into a concentration camp."

The young missionary, determined to take up again her interrupted trip to Africa, where she will attempt to Christianize 22,000 Maban tribesmen, considers her rescue strictly owing to Providence.

She asked The Post to print this quotation from the Bible: "He shall call upon me and I shall answer Him; I will be with him in trouble. I will deliver him."

Zoo Proud of Hyraxes

Philadelphia (U.P.).—Officials of the Philadelphia Zoological Gardens announced the rare birth here of four hyraxes, little, gentle animals mentioned as "conies" in the Bible. However, one of the babies was too adventurous and wandered into the cage of an African cive.

Farmers Pay Back U. S. Cotton Loans

Rise in Market Prices Causes Rush To Get Bales Being Held as Security

The Agriculture Department's cotton loan program is writing what looks at first glance like a bright page in an otherwise dark volume of New Deal budget statistics.

Captains of the farm program, in these days of skyscraper deficits and mountainous spending find that farmers are paying off their cotton loans and it looks as though in a few weeks the Government will have been paid back almost every penny it has invested in cotton loans in the last three years.

This is what is happening:

At the end of May the Government had 2,900,000 bales of cotton under loan to farmers. The growers had received Federal loans for it and pledged the bales as security, with the understanding that they could pay off the loans and take back the cotton any time before July 31. After that the Government would take final title to the cotton. There was $150,000,000 of United States money tied up in this cotton.

Reason? Rise in Price

Two weeks later, on June 14, there were only 1,900,000 bales still under loan. Farmers had withdrawn 1,000,000 bales in a fortnight, paying off their loans.

The withdrawal is still continuing, at the rate of 150,000 to 200,000 bales a week.

Why?

The reason is a familiar one—it is good business.

The cotton now under loan will cost farmers about 9 cents a pound to reclaim. Cotton prices, rising rapidly in recent weeks, will return the growers 15 cents a pound for the 9-cent loan cotton. Then, under a new law, when the new crop comes in this summer, the farmers can obtain Government loans of about 14 cents per pound on next year's surplus.

The price of cotton, as shown by the spot market average, has been bounding upward.

Prices Still Rising

On March 1 a pound of cotton sold for 10.26 cents. A month later the price was 11 cents; it jumped a half cent in April and to 12.89 cents by June 2.

By June 16 the price had increased almost another cent, and at the start of this week it was within a fraction of 15 cents.

An act of Congress explains this steady rise in the price.

Late last month the President signed a bill providing loans to cotton farmers on their crops up to 85 per cent of the parity price of cotton. Previously the loan rate was only 50 per cent to 75 per cent. Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard greeted passage of this law as a definite sign that parity—an ideal price—will be achieved for cotton. The 8 per cent loan law would return farmers roughly 14 cents for a pound of cotton which, at the major markets, would mean a spot price of about 15 cents a pound.

There is a Government-owned pool of 6,000,000 bales of cotton that could, technically, be thrown on the market and would probably depress the price of cotton.

No Move to Free It

There is very little inclination, however, in official circles to free this Government-owned supply.

One reason is that even if several million bales were sold now, the Government would just have to buy that much more cotton this summer when the new crop comes in. Demand for cotton, with most export markets cut off, is not elastic, and 1,000,000 bales of Government cotton sold now would simply mean 1,000,000 more bales of surplus cotton in the next cotton year, which begins August 1.

Still another reason why officials are not inclined to free the cotton owned by the Commodity Credit Corporation is that there are legal limits on how and how much of its cotton the corporation may sell.

The law prohibits the CCC from selling any of its surplus fibre at a loss. he Government must recover its full investment including agricultural adjustment payments, the law says.

Limit on Sales

Moreover, there is a limit of 300,000 bales per month on sales the CCC may make and of 1,300,000 bales a year.

If all the Government-owned cotton were sold immediately, there would be no use for the next crop, now in the ground, and it is expected to be a healthy one. Private estimates place the 1941 cotton crop between 11,500,000 bales and 13,100,000 bales.

The Government has invested a total of $361,000,000 in the 6,150,000 bales of cotton that it owned, as of May 31.

Virginia V. F. W. Favors Ousting Of Sec. Perkins

Staunton, Va., June 25 (AP).—The Virginia Veterans of Foreign Wars today indorsed President Roosevelt's foreign policy and urged the ousting of Labor Secretary Perkins.

Closing the final business session of their 1941 convention, the V. F. W. delegates also adopted resolutions opposing the merging of the Veterans' Administration with any other agency and favoring military training in Civilian Conservation Corps camps.

The resolution on Secretary Perkins stated the organization's belief that she had "failed miserably" as a conciliator between capital and labor.

The Virginia department's distinguished service medals were awarded to Rear Admiral Manley H. Simons, Brig. Gen. William H. Sands, Rear Admiral J. K. Taussig, and Capt. R. A. McClure.

Awards included: Waynesboro post for largest membership gain.

Gate City, Va., Votes To Retain Liquor Store

Gate City, Va., June 25 (AP).—Citizens of this Scott County township voted two to one in a special referendum yesterday to retain the State liquor store here and by almost the same majority favored the continued sale of wines and beer.

The vote was 425 to 201 on the hard liquor issue and 411 to 221 on the wine-beer question.

In a county-wide election April 15 the entire county by a substantial majority voted against the sale of alcoholic beverages in the county. The election today was held after the town of Gate City petitioned to vote the matter only as its own limits were affected.

Delegation Of Priorities Powers Near

An executive order delegating the defense priorities powers of the recently-enacted Vinson bill to the OPM priorities division and the Office of Price Admnilstration, is expected to be signed by President Roosevelt within the next 48 hours, it was reported yesterday.

The order represents termination of a sharp conflict between the ideas of Price Administrator Leon Henderson and Priorities Director E. R. Stettinius, jr., over the proper agenc yto handle allocations of "indirect" defense items, such as railroads, power plants, pipelines, etc.

Before an agreement was reached, the question of which office should determine what were "indirect" defense items was in dispute, It was agreed, however, that Stettinius should control priorities on direct defense manufactures and that Henderson would have complete supervisio nof allocations of scare materials to competing civilian industries after defense needs had been met.

The prospective order, it was indicated, wil vlest in OPM the priorities function for indirect defense requirements.

Meantime, as the first step in its new administrative plan to conduct affairs by commodity sections and industry advisory committees, the OPM announced the formation of an electrical industry advisory committee of 24 business leaders. The committee, whose functions will be purely advisory, the OPM said, will be supervised by two officials of the OPM purchasing division.

Entire Union Asked Here to Mediate

U. S. Board Takes Unprecedented Action in Effort to Avert Utility 'Blackout' at Pittsburgh

The National Defense Mediation Board last night sought to prevent a black-out of parts of the Pittsburgh defense area by summoning the entire membership of an electric utility workers union to board hearings here.

The unprecedented action followed a stalemate in negotiations in the dispute involving the Duquesne Light Co.'s Colfax plant, after representatives of an independent union revealed that they had no power to make definite committments, a board spokesman explained.

As a result, the board invited the entire membership of the local—42 employes, whose travel expenses will be paid by the company—to confer with the board tomorrow.

The dispute arose when the C. I. O. Utility Workers Organizing Committee, which claims majority representation, threatened to strike for recognition as bargaining agent for the 312 employes in the plant. The independent union, despite its minority membership, holds a collective bargaining contract with the company.

Appeals to Truck Drivers

The dispute was certified to the board last wek, at which time the C. I. O. unionists postponed their threatened strike. Yesterday was the first day of hearings.

Other Mediation Board developments yesterday:

The board called on 2,800 striking truck drivers and 179 Pittsburgh trucking concerns to "make every possible effort" to settle their strike, which already has slowed production in the key defense area. The strike, certified to the board yesterday, was called on June 1 by the A. F. of L. teamsters union, seeking wage increases. A mass meeting with Pittsburgh Mayor Cornelius D. Scully and Federal Conciliator J. A. Moffitt was scheduled for last night. Board Chairman William H. Davis asked Scully to report on the meetings progress, but set no date for board hearings.

Lumber Strike Plea Renewed

The board issued a renewed plea to lumber operators and members of the C. I. O. International Woodworkers of America to make a final effort at settling their dispute in the Puget Sound area by direct negotiation, and thus avoid the necessity of creating a commission to investigate the industry and recommend wage conditions. The case involves 12,000 employes, of whom about 1,500 have not yet returned to work following a strike of many weeks.

In the Pittsburgh truckers' strike, a difference of only 2-cents-an-hour wage increase separated the negotiators. The union, which originally had sought a 10-cents-an-hour jump, indicated it would settle for 8 cents. Representatives of the strike-bound companies have offered 6 cents.

Progra mto Cut Oil Consumption Approved

The Commissioners yesterday paved the way for enactment of a local program for voluntary curtailment of gasoline and motor oil consumption by formally approving recommendations of their new Petroleum Conservation Committee.

By the end of the week, it was announced, a campaign will be underway to "educate" motorists in ways and means of cutting 20 per cent from the city's motor fuel consumption.

The drive will be aimed principally at pleasure car owners who now burn an estimated 7,300,000 gallons of gasoline a month. These private drivers will be urged to cut this gas consumption by 2,200,000 gallons.

Washington is the first city in the country to inaugurate a gasoline and oil conservation program. Shortage of tanker service to the Atlantic coast area prompted Interior Secretary Ickes, new national petroleum administrater, to propose the plan for Washington.

In addition to pleasure car owners, operators of buses, taxis, trucks and motor boats will be asked to cooperate in a city-wide movement to curtail motor fuel use.

Through the press, radio and with posters, the Commissioners plan to impress owners of all types of motor vehicles with the urgent necessity for cooperation.

If the voluntary reduction program fails, it was predicted that drastic compulsory methods would be used to effect the gasoline saving.

Washington motorists of all types, it was reported, consume about 15,150,000 gallons of gasoline a month. They will be asked to cut this by 3,040,000 gallons.

The conservation program has as its slogan "Make Four Gallons Do What Five Did Before."

Home-Stretch Spurt Any Time You Say
PAYS YOUR GAS TAX FOR YOU
At present Federal tax rates, the savings on gasoline effected by Compound Carburetion are usually more than enough to pay Federal taxes on the gas you buy.
1941
PLENTY of men can run a mile around a cinder track.
But those who win races—and championships—are the ones who can turn on the plus when it's needed.
Probably that's why you hear so much these days about Buick's exclusive Compound Carburetion.†
It gives you an engine that will cruise right along with the distance runners and pile up plenty of miles for your gasoline money.
No fooling—owners write in to tell us of mileage as much as 10% to 15% greater than previous Buicks gave.
But any time you want plus-performance—a home-stretch spurt—just step down on the gas treadle.
Instantly, you send an extra carburetor into action. You step up the supply of both gasoline and air—and virtually give yourself a bigger engine to get you places in a hurry.
That means thrills—and plenty of them.
It means sure-fire lift in the pinches, zooming power whenever you say.
It means, also, efficiency—proper use of every drop of fuel without useless waste.
It bears out the Big Point about this 1941 Buick—that on size, style, comfort, room and ability, it's far and away the top value of the year.
To see how true that is, just go size one up against the low delivered prices your nearest Buick dealer is asking.
†Available on Buick SPECIAL models at slight extra cost, standard on all other Series.
$930 for the Business Coupe (illustrated above) including Compound Carburetion, delivered at Flint, Mich. State tax, optional equipment and accessories—extra. Prices and specifications subject to change without notice.

Promotion Ban Seen Blessing in Disguise

Federal employe administrative promotions would be banned in the 1942 fiscal year by a rider that was tied onto the Second Deficiency Bill that was reported yesterday to the House. However, the rider probably will prove to be a blessing in disguise as it will put the pressure on the Senate to pass the House-approved uniform promotion plan. The committee report explained that its ban would be lifted if the Senate acts favorably on the uniform plan. Unless promotions were stopped, after July 1 agencies would be free to promote and the committee said the inevitable result would be that the favored agencies could make many promotions and attract personnel from old-line bureaus.

Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee, said he favored the rider as it would force action on the promotion plan. Senator James Mead, of New York, has been appointed chairman of a subcommittee to hold hearings on the promotion bill. Senator Byrd will serve with him. The rider would stop the plan of Federal Security and other agencies to put the plan in effect on July 1. Efficient employes would be given regular promotions under the plan.

Another rider wold limit the number of Navy employes that can be hired here to a total of 10,500. The Navy expects to have 13,000 employes here by July 1942, and it urged the committee to raise the limitation to that amount. The committee said it fit becomes absolutely essential to go beyond 10,500 the Department could again seek Congressional approval. The present limitation is 8,750 and the Department is up to the limit now. The Navy will be delayed in its work until the new limitation becomes law.

Navy also asked Congress for permission to hire 16 additional employes at salaries above $5,000. The committee refused and gave it authority to hire only one, a special attorney who will be assigned to the Undersecretary. Why the committee should pick on Navy to limit salaries is very strange indeed as the department probably has fewer civilians paid more than $5,000 than any single large department or agency.

Slap at President

The committee took an indirect crack at the President when it added another rider that would prevent his giving the Office of Government Reports additional funds during the 1942 fiscal year from his "blank-check" fund . . . The Civil Service Commission had its estimates slashed $343,530, which will hamper its defense work and cause many employes to be discharged if the cut sticks.

The President yesterday signed an executive order that exempts from Civil Service all positions in the Inland Waterways Corporation until June 30, 1943, and five special assistants to the Secretary of State. Mike Schaefer has been reelected president of A. F. G. E.'s Navy lodge for the tenth consecutive year. Serving wit hhim are Eleanor Wagner, vice president; Helen Voss, secretary; Lillimay Powers, treasurer, and Clarence Mann, sergeant-at-arms.

The UPMA local at USHA yesterday said the three members who resigned were "trouble-makers who would like to run the union in a clique-like fashion." It accused them also of trying to get other members to resign . . . The union contends 40 new members have signed up during the scrap on the Noten case.

Plain-talk department: Representative Taber: "If your outfit still in competition to be the most inefficient outfit in the Government as strenuously as it was a year ago?"

FCC Chairman James Fly: "No, sir; any time this committee wants to give me a hearing on that charge, Mr. Taber, I will be very happy to sit around this table and we will slug it out . . . I would like to go into two or three cases that have gotten into your craw, sir; and I think that would help us get these things out of your mind."

State Rebates $14,000 on Ferry Stubs

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 25.—The State roads commission has refunded approximately $14,000 to holders of rebate coupons issued by the Annapolis-Claiborne Ferry Co., William A. Codd, chief commission auditor, estimated today.

Codd said the commission was redeeming the coupons at its offices in Baltimore, aboard the ferry boats, and at the Annapolis and Matapeake ticket offices.

The largest single refund made to date, he said, was $8,800 paid out to a bus company which held a huge block of certificates.

When the State took over operation of the ferry line June 10, it agreed to assume all obligations for the coupons, which were issued by the company after it obtained an injunction restraining the public service commission from putting into effect reduced passenger fares.

When the ferry was taken over, Codd estimated that outstanding coupons had a maximum cash value of $65,000. He said it was impossible to estimate how many of them had been thrown away.

The auditor said holders had presented tickets ranging in number from one up to more than 300. The coupons are worth from 10 to 20 cents, depending on the color.

Editor Urges Preparation For War With Germany

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., June 25.—Max Eastman, New York author and editor, told the University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs tonight the the United States should prepare to enter the war against Germany.

Eastman, a writer on international topics, contended that "if we are ready to make an open gift of all help to England because we believe that free civilization will probably perish from the earth if Hitler conquers, we ought to be ready, in case of certain need, to fight by England's side."

"Those who oppose all-out aid to Britain at this time on the basis of concern for American democracy, are not thinking practically, Eastman said, disavowing a military temperament by explaining he vigorously opposed American participation in the World War.

At War in Principle

"In principle we are at war with Hitler now," he continued. "We have openly declared our intention to defeat him by aiding his enemy. We are united on this as few nations not actually invaded ever have been on a foreign policy."

Eastman explained this national solidarity upon so unusual a policy of staying out of war and yet winning it by saying "we are for staying out of the war in so far as it is a conflict of European nationalities. In so far as it is a conflict of social systems we know we have to win it.

"This war is, if any war in history ever was, a war between two ways of life. You will not find a deeper contrast in all the records of men's battle cries than that between "Mein Kampf" and the speeches of Churchill and Roosevelt. This contrast is a valid indication of the significance to mankind of its result."

Eastman gave a list of what he termed 21 major traits of totalitaranism, "every one of them to be found in Germany, Italy and Russia, and not one in England or the United States."

Near East Is Vital

Emil Lengyel, Hungarian, now professor of history at the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, expressed the opinion this afternoon that irrespective of events in the West, the war's outcome may be decided in the East.

Loss of the Near East by Great Britain would also involve the loss of Canada, said Lengyel, who argued that while it has been good business for Canada to stick to an England that gave protection of a world empire, defeat in the Near East would reduce Britain to a second-rate power with which it might not be good business for Canada to be linked.

Michael Florinsky, Russian, now lecturing in economics at Columbia University, told the institute that "the predatory policies of both Germany and the Soviet Union would seem to reap their deserved reward in this titantic struggle for mutual destruction between the totalitarian states.

Soviet Is Assailed

He warned, however, that despite the justification England must feel in cooperating against a common enemy, the ideology of the Soviet Union and its Communistic domestic and foreign policies remain "inimical to the high ideals for the preservation of which other opponents of Germany are fighting."

He continued: "At a time when this country is called upon to make immense sacrifices for the cause of democracy and the protection of small nations, it would seem ill advised to praise the U. S. S. R. It is a distressing paradox that while 'appeasement' has been made a term of derision, the Administration appeared to be willing to go a long way to 'appease' the most ruthless dictatorship, which has a heavy share of responsibility for the outbreak of the war."

Rain Deficiency Remains Peril to Virginia Crops

Richmond, June 25 (A.P.)—Deficiency in moisture and a hot sun are combining to scorch lawns and endanger Virginia crops, agriculture and weather reports indicated today.

The Weather Bureau here said no rain was in sight for this section before the end of the week.

The State cooperative crop reporting service said that while rainfall over much of the State had been good and crops had improved, another inch or more of rain was needed in this area and on the Eastern Shore.

Richmond records showed a drop below normal in precipitation since January 1 of 8.51 inches. Some other sections of the State have been equally as dry, although several days of light rains early this month served to relieve a prolonged spring drought.

Utilities to Pay 10% Heavier Taxes in Va.

Richmond, Va., June 25 (A.P.).—An increase of $453,336 in the amount of taxes public service corporations will pay Virginia this fall compared with 1940 was reported today by the State corporation commission.

Assessments prepared by J. C. Masten of the commission's taxation office showed $4,918,337 in State taxes would be due from these companies, representing an increase of 10.15 per cent over last year and 10.14 per cent over the previous banner year of 1927.

WPA 'Shutdown' Seen Key to Farm Labor Problem

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., June 25.—Farm leaders today hailed the July 1 shutdown of all but two WPA projects in Frederick County as a probable solution to the local farm labor problem. A check recently made by WPA officials of their rolls revealed 266 men with farm experience and physically able to work at agricultural pursuits. The shutdown will make these men available for farm work, officials declared.

Under the existing setup, it was pointed out, these men should have been available for farm work. The system failed to provide means of forcing the men off WPA rolls into private employment.

Local WPA officials announced yesterday the termination of all projects in the county except the Frederick sewing project and the airport. A total of 529 persons will be dropped from the WPA pay roll when the order becomes effective on July 1.

Md. Forester Protests Cut In CCC Work

Besley Charges 'Discrimination' In Plan to Drop Two Woods Camps

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 25.—State Forester F. W. Besley today lodged with Maryland's congressional delegation a protest over what he termed the "discrimination" of the Civilian Conservation Corps in abandoning forest camps in the State.

Besley said he had been notified that two of the six camps at work on Maryland State forests would be abandoned at the end of June.

He said that represents a cut of one-third, as there are now six camps devoted to forest conservation work under the supervision of the forestry department.

In the Nation as a whole, Besley said, CCC strength is being reduced by only about 16 per cent.

The State forester sent telegrams and letters of protest to Senators Tydings and Radcliffe and to Representatives David J. Ward, William P. Cole, jr., Dansdale G. Sasscer and Mrs. Katherine Edgar Byron in whose districts the camps are located.

"Our CCC camps are doing work on the State forests of outstanding value to the people of Maryland," Besley said today, "and to close one of them at this time would seriously impede progress in this very necessary development."

Besley said he had been notified that camps in Deer Park and on the Eastern Shore near Snow Hill would be abandoned by the CCC at the end of this month. That will leave only three camps in Garrett County and one in Allegany, he added.

There are at present 21 CCC camps in the State—six classified as soil conservation projects, six as State forest projects, four as national park camps, three as agricultural camps, and two as State park camps.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

All Over But Shouting, Ancient Seer Tells Us

He Died in 1566, but Has Us Winning War; Max Gordon Turns Up Likely Operetta; Short Takes Concerning Amusement World

SO YOU MIGHT AS WELL STOP worrying about the war and save all that wear and tear on the nervous system.

Carey Wilson, that bright young man who supplies the cinema with some of its most engaging short subjects, through the facilities of M-G-M, as we say in the control room, has just completed another "Nostradamus." Although this fellow Nostradamus shuffled off this mortal coil in 1566, he has maintained a lulu of a batting average in the looking-ahead league down through the centuries.

MADELEINE CARROLL

In this new business Mr. Wilson has churned up, Nozzie repeats that Britain still will be ruling the waves after the present war is over; that in Germany a new sect will be born which will revive Pagan times; that Roman power will be thoroughly abashed and that the daughter of the English Isles—and when did Uncle Sam become a daughter?—will reestablish unity and justice and imprison war behind its bars. Iron, not sit-down, bars.

Fantastic? Not if wishful thinking has anything to do with it. And besides that, nobody as yet has had the nerve to sell this seer short, his divinations have proved that accurate.

Now that he has "New Orleans," Producer Max Gordon might as well forget all about "Out West It's Different," if he hasn't already. "New Orleans" is a new Hammerstein-Romberg collaboration that recently played to 32,000 customers in ten performances at the open-air Municipal Opera in St. Louis. Except for the weather, it is estimated that 100,000 would have seen it. Mr. Gordon was so impressed by the premiere that he immediately wired for his stage director, Hassard Short, to come on from New York, against the opening of the piece on Broadway in the fall. Mr. Gordon insists that it is the best operetta that has come along since "Show Boat." That would be pretty good.

Last Call for "Lost Colony"

The 354th anniversary celebration of the founding of Anglo-American civilization and the birth of Virginia Dare, at Fort Raleigh, will begin July 3 at Manteo, N. C., with the opening of the fifth season of Paul Green's patriotic drama of "The Lost Colony." More than 325,000 persons from all sections of the United States and several foreign countries have attended this historical pageant during the past four years. Another 100,000 are expected to witness it this summer, which may be its last. A personal note to this desk has this to say: "We have been able to continue 'The Lost Colony' this year at the birthplace of the Nation, but don't quite know how much longer we can do it. Not a question of finance, for both the State and Federal government will see us through, but the world question. The original Oberammergau had to fold up in Germany last year . . . We don't know how many of our folks will have to answer the "call" by next summer. A few already have."

The disturbingly lovely Madeleine Carroll has turned tub-thumper—which raises the pulchritude of press-agentry an easy 1,000 per cent. Not one, but two, lipsticked postcards arrive over Miss Carroll's ostensible signature, bearing this jingle:

Dazzling stars from the cinema sky,
Tunes for a gal to sing to a guy,
Laughter that's gay, romance that's high . . .
They're all in "Kiss the Boys Goodbye."

What's the big idea, Madeleine? You are supposed to be down in Nassau and are not even in the picture. It's Mary Martin, in case you haven't heard.

Full Speed Ahead!

A new one-reeler called "The Battle" sounds faintly to this corner like a species of aid and comfort to the enemy. It will depict on the screen the battle deployment of every type of craft in the United States Navy, from tiniest subchaser to mightiest of the battlewagons, showing how all sea forces are coordinated and employed with maximum effect. Thought all that was nobody's business but the Navy's.

Voice-from-the-Back-of-the-Hall Note

Well, anyhow, Mister, it isn't too much of yours!

EVA GABOR,

considered by the brass hats one of Paramount's best bets for stardom. Born in Budapest, she was signed to a long-term contract even before she could speak English and has just completed her first assignment, opposite Richard Arlen in "Forced Landing." At any rate, she seems to know how to keep cool about it all

HEDDA HOPPER

Old Memories of an Old Set

Hollywood, Cal., June 25.—As I walked through the castle set for "Smilin' Through," I thought that all this talk about waste in motion pictures certainly doesn't apply to that two-story bay window they are using. Originally built for the English manor house in Norma Shearer's first talking picture, "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," it has served Metro well for about 13 years now.

ERROL FLYNN

Sure, it's been redecorated, repainted, repaned, and is so old they could almost sell it as an antique. Seeing it again reminded me of a scene we did in that earlier picture, with Norma Shearer wearing a heavy pink taffeta dress, floor length, and embroidered with sequins. Every time she walked, the rustle of her skirt sounded like the swish of the sea in the sound control room, and they didn't know how to take the swish out of that dress. Finally they solved the problem by lining Norma's skirt with flannel, which deadened the sound. And we all got an extra day's pay while they were doing it!

Errol Flynn mistook a stranger's car for Gwenn Pickford's, and wanting to be funny, planted a couple of torpedoes in the engine, so when the lady stepped on the starter, the explosion threw her against the wheel, spraining her arm severely. Of course, Errol was apologetic, and explained he thought the car belonged to a friend. Which is something like the girl who shoved a man off a wharf, and, when he came up sputtering, was horrified to discover he was a perfect stranger. "Oh, do forgive me!" she said, "I thought you were a friend of mine!" "Lady," yelled the man, "all I got to say is—that's a heck of a way to treat a friend!"

That shindig at Harry Carey's ranch, to celebrate his thirty-third year in pictures, was a field day of old-fashioned sentiment, and it was grand seeing old-timers getting their "pitchers" taken —Bill Farnum, Bill Desmond, Duncan Renaldo, Claire Windsor and many others. It was like a whopping family picnic in the good old days back home in Pennsylvania.

Earl Wing, my "sneak preview correspondent," writes in to say that "Skylark" is an A-1, blue ribbon hit. "And why not?" he says, "—with Claudette Colbert, Brian Aherne and Ray Milland at the top of their form, plus witty dialogue and smooth direction. It's a present from Hollywood wrapped in celluloid that's worth more than just 'thanks.'"

"The Shepherd of the Hills" is a powerful study of Ozark Mountain people, done in superb color. Harry Carey and John Wayne are at their best, and if this picture doesn't convince Hollywood of Betty Field's super talent, we'd better shut up shop and quit talking. Marjorie Main, John Qualen, Fuzzy Knight, and James Barton (the original Jeeter Jester of "Tobacco Road") all gave excellent performances.

Fortunio Bonanova walked into Wynn Rocamora's office the other day and said: "Ten years ago you thought I was a concert singer—I thought you were crazy. Since then, I've become a comedian, and just to show you my sense of humor, I'm appointing you my agent!"

You'l never guess Guy Kibbee was an adventurer at heart. He just returned from a 120-mile trip in a rowboat through the rapids of the Rogue River, in Oregon. Guy tells me his prize possession is an eiderdown sleeping bag with an air mattress, which he had built especially for himself.

Metor has a new singer named Gloria Hills, who got her contract the unusual way. She's an American who made a hit in the Paris "Folies Bergere," then got her chance at pictures. Studio's just started testing her.

Carol Bruce used nothing but taxis in New York and the first thing she did in Hollywood was buy a car. She thought she knew how to drive it, but during her first trip bumped into a fire plug, and now Director Frank Lloyd has grounded her for the duration of "This Woman Is Mine."

Hope Rescues Village From Treasury Woe

Bob Hope has taken an entire city out of the financial doldrums, changing red ink to black and enabling the civic officials to pay off the civic employes.

It all came about when Hope, working in "Caught in the Draft," received a letter from Mayor Ed Lavelle. It explained the city's difficulties, pointing out that there was no dough in the treasury to pay off the workers, and requesting a donation.

Closer examination disclosed that Ed is a young boy, and is mayor of "Catsalley," which is a "town" within the actual confines of Holyoke, Mass. The request was for "stage" money, and Hope, with the aid of the property department, promptly dispatched a bundle to Mayor Ed.

"If any kids, in these times, are interested enough in city government and problems to organize their own municipality," stated the erstwhile funny man, "the least we can do is help 'em along any way we can."

Ted Lewis MayBuy California Home

Ted Lewis, currently before the camera in Universal's new Abbott and Costello starrer, "Oh, Charlie," is eyeing Southern California homesites with an idea of investing against the day when he will retire from show business. The sector's widely publicized climate, however, has nothing to do with Lewis plan to make it his home port.

"I'm a booster for the Los Angeles area," Lewis explained, "because no matter where you live within its bounds you're never more than 5 minutes from a golf course!"

Palace

These amiable mockers of matrimony, William Powell and Myrna Loy, are so happily exerting their wit at the Palace in "Love Crazy" that a dividend has been declared in the form of an additional week.

Even lighter froth than their usual fare—since they aren't tracking down villainous Thin Men—their first charade in some time places their 4-year-old marriage on the verge of extinction. But the resourceful Bill discovers a law about insanity and manages to keep his exemplary wife by being too adept at lunacy. Thanks to the featherweight skill of the cast, good taste about a possibly questionable subject, insanity, is never forgotten.

The smart couple does most of the work in "Love Crazy," but when they need companions, Gail Patrick, Florence Bates, Donald MacBride and Jack Carson know exactly how to accommodate them.

A "Crime Does Not Pay" release on immigration problems and a "Passing Parade" on the educational values of white mice, complete the bill.

Columbia

"I Wanted Wings," with its three-ply story of ambitious aviators, barrel-rolls onto the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater this morning for a week's continuation of its F Street popularity.

Not only does this brisk, breezy and, at times, humorous subject afford exciting entertainment, it also paints a reassuring picture of the substantial groundwork that is being laid for America's security in the air. Its principal male characters are three young men from divergent walks of life, who of a sudden find themselves bunkies on the country's principal flying fields, where they prove their mettle, from tyroes to experts, in various ways. One of the ways is to get seriously mixed up in girl trouble—the genesis, naturally, of the film's romantic interest.

Ray Milland, rich playboy; Wayne Morris, athletic star, and William Holden, the lowly mechanic, are the pivotal characters in the action. They are turned over to Brian Donlevy, the perfect tutor, for instruction. Veronica Lake is the girl in the case—and in the fuselage. The flying sequences, of which there are perhaps too many, supply both beauty and thrills.

Late Test

Kathryn Grayson didn't have a screen test until exactly one year to the day after she had signed her contract.

Words to the Great

New York, June 25.

DARRYL ZANUCK: You should put this scene into a picture: It happened last Friday afternoon, when Tony and Renee de Marco went to the office of their lawyer, Louis Nizer, to make the final arrangements for their divorce. The alimony and the terms of the settlement were agreed upon, amicably, and then Renee de Marco started to leave—to catch the train for Reno . . . "Just a minute," Tony called to her—to the girl he had met when she was 16, and with whom he formed a partnership which made then the greatest of modern dance teams. "I'd like just one more dance" . . . And so Tony de Marco took Renee into his arms, and danced her to the door—the final dance of the de Marcos, in a lawyer's office, high above the Broadway streets whose roars of applause had been theirs for many years. He danced her to the door, blew a kiss to her—and off she went to Reno.

Charlie Chaplin Festival Shares Little Bill With 'Men and Ships'

By Richard L. Coe

Everybody's Charlie Chaplin and Uncle Sam's merchant fleet form an unfamiliar, but inimitable, dual offering at the Little Theater this week. The unforgettable wit of the screen's top comic dominates the bill in a group of six of his early comedies under the title "Charlie Chaplin Festival" and the merchant marine is saluted in a brief but glorious documentary from the Maritime Commission, "Men and Ships."

Apart from the intrinsic worth of the 24-year-old Chaplin comedies, this observer discovered one virtue that's not the property of most ancient film classics. There's no need to search for the eyewash after this "festival" is over. The film obviously has been reconditioned, much in the manner which makes the revivals of New York's Museum of Modern Art so enjoyable a fascination. The eye-searing streaks and flickers, in the undying words of Mr. Goldwyn, have been "included out."

This "festival" is the first in a series of two groups reviving 12 shorts made by Chaplin in 1916-17 for the old Mutual Film Co. "The Vagabond" finds him a chivalrous fiddler; "The Immigrant" displays him as a bewildered foreigner; in "The Adventurer" and "The Count" he exerts his amatory ability; in "Easy Street," one of his most celebrated early films, he's a helpful cop and in "The Cure" he's a lively drunk whose slap-stick is the sort that makes one gasp for breath.

In case you had forgotten, or hadn't thought about it, comedy on the screen has really gotten pretty refined with its coming-of-age. There are some rough stretches of humor that would blanch the faces of the Hays Office in this self-conscious day; obvious stuff, perhaps, even out-dated in its broadness, but still titivating.

You'll note most of the supporting casts in this string of comedies are the same. The fabled Edna Purviance is his leading lady in most of them and the rotund Eric Campbell is the force of destiny forever attacking Charlot. Another thing you'll watch with amusement in "The Cure" is a dance burlesque a la the one he made the highspot of "The Great Dictator."

The Maritime Commission's film is a supremely beautiful thing to watch and Gail Kubik's musical score has made it a bewitching thing to hear. The picture seeks to point "the way to the rejuvenation of our merchant marine manpower through training for better seamanship and higher morale." It is a report, largely, on how America is doing this now. So clean and sharp is Carl Pryer's photography and so well recorded is Kubik's music by members of the New York Philharmonic that one often loses full gist of Basil Ruysdael's narrative, which, on the whole, is too loose and rambling to put across the points "Men and Ships" patently seeks to make. But you'll definitely want to go down to the sea in ships after the dazzling effects of this one.

Varied Roles Prove Big Aid To Actresses

A new experiment has just been conducted by a Hollywood producer who believes a change of pace, type of role and even hair-do will cause an increase of interest in a player.

Subject of the experiment has been beautiful Constance Moore, recently named "All American Girl" by a group of nationally known artists. The man who is conducting it is Arthur Hornblow, jr., producer of "I Wanted Wings."

Goes Dramatic

Until Miss Moore is seen in this picture, the public will think of her as an ingenue—a girl credited with light, gay, airy roles in 23 motion pictures. In "I Wanted Wings" she plays a dramatic actress.

"In making the change," Hornblow says, "Miss Moore has been dressed differently, her hair and makeup have been changed, and, more important, she has been given a new type of part with a new director, Mitchell Leisen.

So successful has been the "change over" that the "new" Constance Moore has been given a long term contract at Paramount.

And Miss Moore isn't the only one during the past few years who has benefited from such a change. Sometimes the change is very drastic. As in the case, for instance, of Garbo—who emerged an entirely new person in Ninochka." The great Ernst Lubitsch is credited with that job.

New Paulette

Cecil B. De Mille is credited with changing Paulette Goddard from the sweet little girl of "The Great Dictator," the comedienne of "The Ghost Breakers" to the half-breed "heavy" in "North West Mounted Police."

Definitely successful "change-overs" include that of Carole Lombard, who went from sophistication and some "heavy" roles to a light and slightly slapstick comedienne in "My Man Godfrey," first of a series of such roles; Ginger Rogers, who was playing light parts when she went definitely serious in "The Primrose Path." Credit for both changes is given to Gregory LaCava, famed producer-director, with a zany attitude.

Clyde Develops Into Flower Fan

Andy "California" Clyde, who portrayed a flower enthusiast in the latest "Hopalong Cassidy" release, "Pirates on Horseback," really was bitten by the "garden bug." Since his return from Lone Pine, Calif., where the Harry Sherman production was filmed, Andy has troweled a home-made flower-bed in his backyard.

Easts' Boats Outclassed On Hudson

Cornell Poor Third As Western Giants Battle; Winning Time Is 18:53.03

By the Associated Press

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 25.—The Western breed of rowing supermen ruled the Hudson River again tonight.

The varsity crew from the University of Washington retained its 4-mile intercollegiate championship with incredible ease, and the Huskies and second-place California made a mockery of their Eastern "contention."

Washington, paced by blond, powerful Ted Garhart in his third winning race at Poughkeepsie, whipped California by two lengths in 18:53.3. This was no surprise, for these same Huskies had beaten the Bears by an even greater margin two months ago, when they smashed all records for the Oakland (Calif.) estuary 3-mile course.

What was almost unbelievable about this race was the vast gap between the two Westerners, who among them have won this race eight times in the last nine years, and the best the East could offer. By the end of the first mile and a half the two boats from the Pacific Coast, then locked in a bow-and-bow duel, already had a length of open water on Cornell. At the finish three lengths separated the Ithacans, first of the Eastern eights to finish, from California.

California's time in second place was 19:02.3. Back of them the order was Cornell, 19:14.6; Syracuse, 19:18.9; Princeton, 19:23.4; Wisconsin, making a surprisingly fine showing for the lightest boat on the river, 19:29.4; Rutgers, racing here for the first time and also giving a handsome account itself, 19:29.8; Massachusetts Tech, 19:32.8, and Columbia, whose No. 2 man collapsed in the last quarter-mile and was "out" in the boat as it crossed the line, 19:35.5.

From the first few yards of the racing start it was obvious there were only two crews in the race, and from the way Washington was keeping even or better with California while rowing at a lower beat it also seemed a safe bet the Huskies could win whenever Garhart called on a little extra power.

Huskies Pull Away

It was Washington by a shade after the first half-mile. The two shells, rowing on opposite sides of the nine-boat field, were virtually on a line at the mile mark, and then it was Washington by a matter of mere feet through the next mile and a half.

Going under the railroad bridge and into the last mile, rowing a conservative 30½ to California's 35, the Huskies already had pulled away to a ¾-length margin, and they just kept on drawing away from there to the finish line. Needing to hit no more than 33 strokes to the minute in the final 440 yards, they powered their way past the judges a good two lengths in front and were over by the west bank, kidding with the spectators in the observation train, while the other eight boats were still trying to recover from their 4-mile haul.

After Washington beat California in April, Coach Al Ulbrickson had called them the finest crew he ever had. But all during their training on the Hudson the coach complained about having his men made such outstanding choices to repeat.

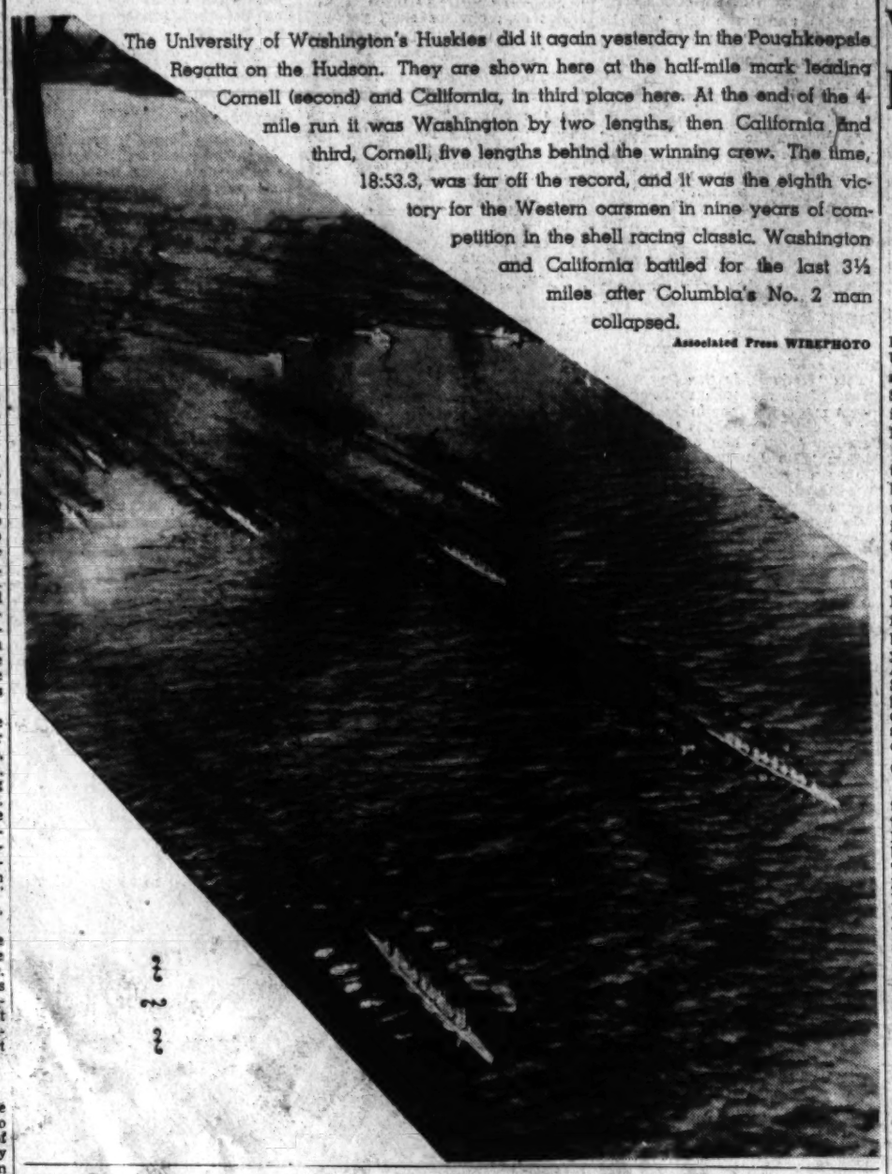
Cornell Frosh Win

The Week with no crew entered in the freshman race, had to be content with two-thirds of the spoils. California's junior varsity beat Washington by a length and a half in 14:40.4, with Cornell third and Columbia fourth and last over the 3 miles.

Cornell's boat scored an unexpected victory in the freshmen 2-mile pull, in which undefeated Syracuse and M. I. T. had been expected to fight Wisconsin for top honors. The Ithacans, never worse than third, still were in that spot going into the last half mile but came up like a splintery streak to beat Wisconsin by a good length in 9:57.7. Back of the Badgers came Syracuse, Princeton, M. I. T. and once again, Columbia.

The crowd was the smallest in years. The observation train had only ten cars, the fleet of spectator boats was small, and in all probability about 25,000 saw the regatta.

Huskies Maintain Supremacy Over Easterners



The University of Washington's Huskies did it again yesterday in the Poughkeepsie Regatta on the Hudson. They are shown here at the half-mile mark leading Cornell (second) and California, in third place here. At the end of the 4-mile run it was Washington by two lengths, then California and third, Cornell, five lengths behind the winning crew. The time, 18:53.3, was far off the record, and it was the eighth victory for the Western oarsmen in nine years of competition in the shell racing classic. Washington and California battled for the last 3½ miles after Columbia's No. 2 man collapsed.

Two Straight Walks Fetch Decisive Run

Second Tally Scores On Triple Steal as Kuhel Goes Home; Rigney Brilliant

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Long John Rigney, White Sox pitcher who was classified as 4-F by United States Army doctors, was a superb A-1 specimen at Griffith Stadium yesterday. He won a 13-inning, 2-0 pitching duel from the Nats and Sid Hudson.

Hudson, who figuratively carried the Nats into the thirteenth on his back, what with their failure to stir up a run for him in a show of base ingratitude for his work, pitched three-hit ball until the last inning.

For Rigney it was a brilliant triumph. He held the Nats to six hits. But for Hudson it was a sorry defeat. The Chicago run that won the ball game scored when the Nats' young right-hander walked Luke Appling with the bases full. The Sox didn't bat a run across the plate. The second run scored on one of baseball's rare plays—a triple steal, with Joe Kuhel on the head end.

Comes Trouble

Mike Kreevich started Hudson's trouble with one out in the thirteenth when he singled to center. It was only the fourth hit permitted by Hudson. To that point, only Taft Wright had been able to hit him safely, and Wright had collected all of the Sox's three hits. Joe Kuhel, on the perfect execution of a hit-and-run play, sliced a double down the third base line, and Kreevich moved to third with one out.

In this crisis Wright was ordered passed to fill the bases and Hudson pitched to Appling. With the count three balls and one strike, Hudson's next pitch was inside of the plate and the winning run jogged home.

Then it was that the White Sox added the second-run frill. Slyly flashing the signs among themselves the three runners on base started to move as Hudson went into a long windup. As Kuhel neared the plate, the startled Hudson stood almost transfixed in the midst of his windup. When he was able to get the ball away, it was too late and Kuhel was across the plate with the second run of the inning.

Year's Best Duel

It was Griffith Stadium's—probably the league's—finest pitching duel of the year. Hudson allowed only five hits in contrast to the six off Rigney, ut for nine innings, Rigney was pitching two-hit ball. The only Washington athlete to get

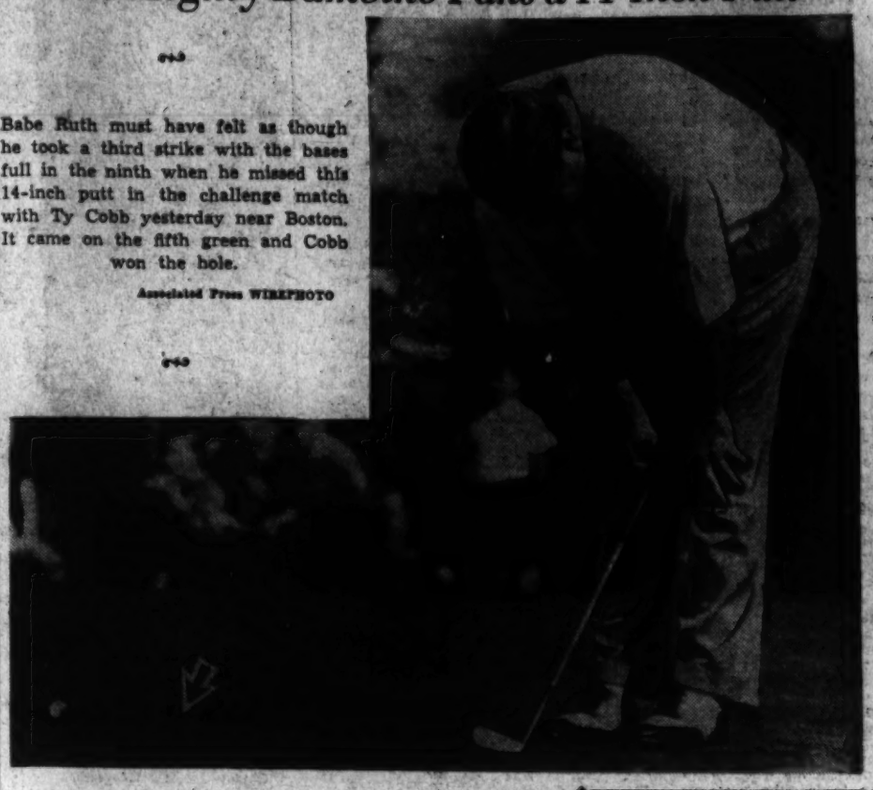
The Mighty Bambino Fans a 14-Inch Putt



Babe Ruth must have felt as though he took a third strike with the bases full in the ninth when he missed this 14-inch putt in the challenge match with Ty Cobb yesterday near Boston. It came on the fifth green and Cobb won the hole.

Cobb Beats Ruth, 3&2, With Trusty Putter

2,000 See Georgia Peach Tri mBambino in 1st Of Series of Matches; Winner Has 81

By the United Press

Chestnut Hill, Mass., June 25.—Ty Cobb played with the same scientific style that made him a baseball immortal to conquer Babe Ruth today in their first meeting on the golf links after a series of cross-country challenges.

Cobb, slightly mellowed at 54, exhibited a good putting touch to whip Ruth, 3 and 2, in their 18-hole exhibition match at the Commonwealth Country Club.

An assorted gallery of about 2,000, including baseball fans, women and children, followed the southpaw rivals in holiday spirit. Yelping dogs and crying babies added to the confusion as marshals sought to check the crowd behind bamboo poles.

But for Ruth and Cobb, it was serious business. The old competitive spirit that brought them fame in the golden era of sports flamed again. They exchanged few words as they toured the 6,200-yard course under a hot sun.

Cobb covered the par 72 layout in 81 strokes, two less than the one-time home run king.

When Cobb, now a resident of Glenbrook, Nev., was presented a trophy offered by Screen Star Bette Davis, he smilingly said:

"I sure got something there to show that I beat Babe Ruth at golf."

Charity Benefit

The duel was held for the benefit of the Golden Rule Farm for Boys, Franklin, N. H. Cobb and Ruth clash again Friday at Fresh Meadows, Flushing, N. Y., and P. G. A. Tournament Manager Fred Corcoran said a "rubber match" may be played later at Detroit.

Cobb, who set a flock of batting records during his 24-year tenure in the American League, terminated today's battle on the sixteenth hole which he halved with a par 3. They shook hands and agreed to play the last two holes "for the crowd."

Leading 1 up at the turn after rallying to sweep four holes in succession, Cobb held Ruth even on the first four of the last nine holes. Cobb went 2 up on the fourteenth by sinking a short putt and virtually clinched victory by canning a 10-footer on the fifteenth.

"He's a puttin' fool," bellowed the Bambino as Cobb stopped to withdraw his ball from the cup.

The 47-year-old Ruth won the first hole where Cobb's tee shot hooked the seventeenth fairway.

But Cobb, studying every shot like a professional, settled down after Ruth had gone two up with a birdie on the fourth. Ruth's 40-foot downhill shot, best of the match, went into the cup on this hole and drew from Cobb, "You can't beat that kind of luck."

Ruth outdrove the Georgia native on every hole, but his mediocre green work proved too great a handicap to overcome. The outcome was apparent when Ruth flubbed a 14-inch putt on the fifth green.

Seeded Stars Pace Field At Haverford

By the United Press

Haverford, Pa., June 25.—First and second seeded Joe Hunt, Naval Academy, and Ted Olewine, Southern California, paced the field into the semi-nals of the fifty-eighth annual national intercollegiate tennis tournament at the Merion Cricket Club today.

Hunt brushed aside Calvin Sawyier, Chicago, 6—1, 6—1, and Olewine defeated Frank Mehner, Utah, 6—2, 6—3.

Joe Davis, Vanderbilt, and Bill Canning, California, also entered the semifinals. Davis upset seeded Dick McKee, Miami, 6—2, 6—4, and Canning won over Charles Mattmann, Southern California, 6—1, 6—3.

Olewine will meet Canning tomorrow and Hunt will play Davis Friday.

Cards Whip Braves, 6-2, Retain Lead

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 25.—The St. Louis Cardinals had to win today or lose the National League lead to Brooklyn so they pounced on Boston again, this time, 6 to 2, to keep that half-game margin.

Ernie White, rookie hurler, won his fifth game of the season, struck out nine Braves and allowed only seven hits but his string of scoreless innings was snapped at 27 when Sebastion Sisti singled in the second driving in Boston's two runs.

That pair of runs tied the Cardinals' two of the first inning but not for long. Before the second inning ended, St. Louis led, 5 to 2, and a sixth run was added in the seventh on Capt. Terry Moore's third home run of the year.

Manager Casey Stengel shook up his batting order, without success. He sent Don Manno to first base, Waner to right field and Chet Ross to left. The first two each got a hit but Ross struck out three times.

To start the Cardinal third Steve Mesner singled to left. Martin Marion hit safely into left field, sending Mesner to third. Art Johnson then replaced John Hutchins as the Boston pitcher and immediately uncorked a wild pitch, Mesner scoring and Marion reaching third. White flied to Ross, scoring Marion. Frank Crespi walked and came home on Johnny Hopp's double.

Poffenberger Hurls Ball at Umpire, Set Down 90 Days

By International News Service

Atlanta, Ga., June 25.—Boots Poffenberger, eccentric Nashville pitcher who tried to bean Umpire Ed "Dutch" Hoffman last night, today was suspended for 90 days by Maj. Trammell Scott, president of the Southern Association.

Poffenberger, Nashville's top moundsman in recent games, will be lost for the rest of the season but in Nashville Manager Larry Gilbert declared that the team was "through" with the pitcher.

Boots was ordered from the field last night after what Hoffman described as "continual griping and use of abusive language" and instead of going quietly he turned and threw the ball at the umpire.

X-Ray Discloses Leiber Suffered No Skull Fracture

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 25.—X-ray examination today revealed that Hank Leiber, outfielder with the Chicago Cubs, did not suffer a skull fracture when hit on his head by a fast ball thrown by Pitcher Cliff Melton in the Chicago-New York game yesterday.

The injury was termed a slight concussion. Leiber will be confined to the hospital, however, for several days.

Dr. John F. Davis, Cub physician, said Leiber was struck at a point where the muscles attach to the skull and "this was a blessing."

"A bit higher," Dr. Davis said, "and the result would have been very serious."

Bob Brownell Twice Victor At Columbus

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, June 25.—A star-spangled field of 16, including the defending king, the medalist, Stanford's entire four-man team of champions, not to mention dark-horse, 6-foot-5-inch William Zylstra, of Michigan State—emerged today as winners of first and second round matches in the forty-fortieth National Intercollegiate Golf Classic.

They resume the two-a-day routine Thursday, when the field will be trimmed to the four semifinalists.

Robert Brownell, Duke's Southern Intercollegiate golf champion, romped to twin victories, defeating Byron Adams, of Nebraska, 4 and 2, in the opener and upsetting John Krisko, star of Ohio State's team, 4 and 3 in the second round. He was six over par for two rounds.

Plays Mississippian

In Thursday's third round scrap he is paired against Cary Middlecoff, of Mississippi, who defeated Billy Gilbert, Ohio State's 1940 Western Conference champion, 5 and 4, and then disposed of Karl Kate, of Wooster, 5 and 3. Both Georgetown entries were beaten.

With the field filled with hot-shots, there was no such thing as a favorite in sight, unless it was 19-year-old Earl Stewart, Louisiana State's 150-pound redhead, who won the medal with 142, 2 under par, and then played 32 holes today in 1 under, putting him 3 under even figures for 68 holes.

Stewart had his toughest match against Dan Yates, of Georgia Tech, brother of former British amateur king, Charley Yates, but he finally holed a 15-foot birdie putt on the seventeenth for a 2 and one verdict.

Brooke Wins Twice

F. Dixon Brooke, of Virginia, survived a first-round threat when he was carried 20 holes by John Conry, jr., of Notre Dame, but the defending champion followed that with a 3 and 2 conquest of William Clark, of Dartmouth, to stay in the running.

Stanford's great four-man team, which romped through the 36-hole team match in 580 strokes, four over par, to cut 21 strokes off the record, breezed into the third round.

Third Round Pairings

The pairings for the third round: Marshall Carlson, of Toledo, vs. Warren Berl, of Stanford; A. C. Williams, of Yale, vs. Ray Brownell, of Stanford; Alex Welsh, of Illinois, vs. Dee Replogle, of Stanford; Danny Carmichael, of Princeton, vs. Charles Finger, of Stanford.

WASHINGTON, JUNE 26, 1941

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Along about 1936 when Joe Louis was zooming toward fistic fame, little colored boys started popping into prize rings, taking up a new profession en masse. With the example of Louis before them, the Nation's Negro youth became prize-fight conscious, naturally enough. Even the tots on the corner lots were striking poses and practicing footwork.

POVICH

It was the start of another cycle for Negro youth. In the years immediately preceding Louis' fistic exploits, colored lads thought they had found their sport—track. Jesse Owens, an Ohio Negro boy, had broken three world records in one track meet in the Big Ten and tied another the same afternoon. Owens was indisputably the world's fastest human and Negro boys the country over began to fancy themselves as sprint stars. They were, too. They dominated the big track meets.

But with the arrival of Louis on the fistic scene, in the grand manner, footracing began to lose its glitter for Negro youth. They began appearing in the prize ring in droves along about 1936-37. One of these is the lad who will be the next lightweight champion of the world.

Bob Montgomery chucked his job on the business end of a laundry tub in Philadelphia and decided he'd be a fighter. A little laughing Negro lad out of Sumter, S. C., he began to pick up coins in amateur exhibitions. Twenty-four fights later he turned pro, and after 37 battles as a lightweight he's the uncrowned champion of his division, a sure-shot to win the title the first time he gets a crack at it.

He met the lightweight champion last month, in fact, and butchered him. But unfortunately for Montgomery, he was fighting Champion Lou Jenkins in an overweight bout that didn't count for the title. Montgomery came into the ring a half-pound over the 136-pound limit, because Jenkins insisted on it. The champion wasn't eager to risk his title against Montgomery, and that was very shrewd indeed, because Montgomery knocked him down and won a unanimous decision.

Montgomery is in Washington to fight one Wishy Jones, of Atlanta, on Promoter Joe Turner's Griffith Stadium program Monday evening. That he'll win is a foregone conclusion. There isn't a lightweight in the world who can lick him, say the best minds of the industry.

"He came up the hard way," his manager was saying yesterday. "He came off the street corner and hung around my Girard Street gym for weeks. The gang he traveled with used to beat him up regularly when he first put on the gloves. And then things started to change. Montgomery was giving those boys a time of it, and then the situation was reversed. Bob started beating his pals and anybody could see he was the best fighter in the lot."

One of those lads who used to beat Montgomery in the Philadelphia gym was Tommy Cross, a colored lightweight who was tabbed as a sure-fire title contender. Cross was in Turner's Arena yesterday—as a sparring partner for Montgomery. They boxed three rounds. In the second round, Montgomery fired a right hand to the chin, not a long punch. Cross wobbled, a glazed look came into his eyes, and Montgomery was all for knocking him out until he was called off. The killer instinct is there all right.

He's had two fights with Jenkins, both of them of the non-title variety. The first one he lost on a decision that was not popularly acclaimed. The second fight Montgomery won from here to there and handled the champion as if Jenkins were an obscure challenger. He had Jenkins on the floor in both fights for long counts.

It may be Montgomery's tough luck that he beat Jenkins up too badly in that second fight. They had to do a sewing job on the champion that required 17 statches on his nose and both cheeks. Jenkins won't be able to fight again for months, and Montgomery doesn't know when he'll get another title shot. But he's not so keen about the lightweight title anyway.

"I want Fritzie Zivic," he was saying yesterday. "There's a guy I think I can lick even if he is a welterweight. I'd like to go for that welterweight title. I saw Zivic beat Henry Armstrong and it gave me ideas. The colored people would like to see me beat the fellow who took Armstrong's title, and any time my manager can make that match I'll like it."

Yankees Win, Take League Lead as Indians Lose to Bosox

N. Y. Tops Browns, 7-5; Tribe Trounced, 7-2

DiMag Hits Homer To Stretch Both Batting Streaks

By the Associated Press

New York, June 25.—An old and respected tenant, the New York Yankees, moved back into first place in the American League today by belting the St. Louis Browns, 7 to 5, while the Cleveland Indians were losing to the Boston Red Sox.

It was the first time since the second week of the season that the Yankees had been on top of the circuit which they dominated for years and their new lease was based on a slender percentage margin, .503 to .507.

In advancing to the lead the Yankees extended two hitting streaks and until the late innings these seemed to matter more to the small crowd of 9,249 at Yankee Stadium than did the score of the game.

There was a spontaneous burst of applause as Joe DiMaggio strode to the plate for the first time in the second inning and loud moaning when his 410-foot fly into leftfield was caught.

Then in the fourth he came to bat again after Tom Henrich had singled and this time he shot a sizzling liner into the left-field stands for his sixteenth home run of the year and the thirty-seventh consecutive game in which he has hit safely. It also was the thirty-fourth homer the Yanks have collected over a record stretch of 20 straight games.

New York tallied twice again in the next inning when Dennis Galehouse loaded the bases on three successive walks and an error and an infield out let two of them home after Johnny Allen went to the mound. This seemed to mark out an easy trail to victory, but the Yanks lost their way temporarily.

The Browns had put together a walk and two singles for a run in the second and in the sixth they chased Spud Chandler with two more runs on George McQuinn's double and two singles. Relief Pitcher John Murphy treated Harlond Clift to his eleventh home run with one on in the eighth to send the Browns ahead.

The Yanks were game. They staged a three-run uprising in their half for the winning margin, as Charley Keller doubled and was followed by three singles.

Lefty Grove Hurls 298th Triumph, Giving Seven Hits

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 25.—The Boston Red Sox knocked Cleveland out of first place in the American League today behind the seven-hit pitching of "Lefty" Grove, who set back the Indians, 7 to 2, for the 298th victory of his baseball career.

The veteran southpaw, whose goal is 300 victories, put the Red Sox just two games behind the league-leading Yankees.

Always at his best in hot weather, Grove was found for only one extra base hit—a double by Gerald Walker that led to the Indians' two runs in the fourth.

In registering his fifth triumph of the season against two defeats, Grove became invincible as the game progressed and only one Indian reached base in the last three innings—Lou Boudreau receiving his fourth walk of the game in the ninth.

The Red Sox belted Jim Bagby for nine hits—one being Ted Williams' fourteenth home run in the fourth with one mate aboard to tie the score.

In the seventh, Grove started a Boston uprising that brought five runs by singling with ne ut. Dom DiMaggio and Lou Finney followed with doubles. Joe Cronin fouled out, but Jimmy Foxx picked up the slack with a two-bagger and the final two runs came home when Walker muffed Jim Tabor's high fly.

Red Sox' Mr. Tabor Loses Out in Three-Point Landing

Third Baseman Jim Tabor, of the Boston Red Sox, staked all on this tricky dive into the dirt in an effort to get back to third base but was tagged out by Russ Peters, the Clevelands' third sacker. Jim had tried to stretch his sprint from second to home but he saw he couldn't make it. Umpire Grieve calls the play. Bosox won, anyway, 7-2

Billy Conn Flies to Side Of Ill Mother

By International News Service

Pittsburgh, June 25.—Billy Conn's bed-ridden mother suffered a relapse today and prompted her son, who was in New York to sign a $25,000 movie contract, to dash by airplane to her side.

Ill for the past few years, Mrs. Conn has been in a serious condition for some time and could not accompany her husband to New York last week when Billy nearly lifted the heavyweight crown from Joe Louis.

Billy Off for Hollywood Next Month for Picture

New York, June 25 (INS).—Billy Conn and his manager, Johnny Ray, will leave for Hollywood in about three weeks, the handsome fighter said today after signing a contract with Republican Films to make a movie entitled "Kid Tinsel."

Said Conn of his romance with Mary Louis Smith, of Pittsburgh, whose father has been opposed to their marriage:

"It will take me a little while to soften up the old man."

Montgomery Covets Triple Fight Crown

Negro Lightweight Would Duplicate Armstrong's Mark

Bob Montgomery, the Philadelphia flailer whose ring tactics greatly resemble those of Henry Armstrong, left no doubt about his intentions to duplicate Hammerin' Hank's "triple play" yesterday when he showed up for a public workout in Joe Turner's swat emporium.

Dusky Robert, who fights Wishy Jones in Griffith Stadium Monday night in a 10-rounder, slapped a sparring partner to the floor four times and then opined as how he intends to win the lightweight, welterweight and middleweight championships before quitting the ring.

"And he's just the guy who can do it, too," beamed Farnkie Thomas, the Philadelphia fighter's manager who thinks so much of his boy he carries two—not one—trainers wherever Montgomery goes.

Growing Fast

"Lookit him," Thomas invited. "He's just a kid and growing like a prairie fire. Right now I think he's the greatest fighting machine I ever saw when he gets a few more pounds on him there isn't going to be anybody within 20 pounds of him who can lick him."

Montgomery stepped through a fast workout with Tommy Cross, his colored sparring partner, and battered Tommy unmercifully. The Philadelphia lightweight, whose victory over Jones Monday night is a foregone conclusion, literally rained punches on Cross' face and body and displayed a powerful punch in his right hand.

He'll train at Turner's arena again today at 1 p. m. and for the remainder of the week at the same time. Recent conqueror of Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins in a nontitle fight, Bob is biding his time for a return shot and at the championship.

Phil Furr, Washington's veteran welterweight, fights Al Franklin, local colored youngster, in a ten-rounder on the Monday night card and yesterday said he'd like to fight Montgomery.

Milo Steinborn, Abie Coleman On Mat Tonight

Milo Steinborn, the reformed Memphis blacksmith, will attempt to arrest the winning streak of little Abie Coleman in tonight's feature wrestling bout at Turner's Arena.

Steinborn's special delight is a bear hugh, his own creation, and he will match it against Abie's "Coleman clutch."

Smallest groan artist in the game, Abie has scored victories in succession over Angelo Leone, Jim Austeri, Lou Plummer and the Green Hornet the masked man—all as a result of the Coleman clutch."

A two-man team match will be served up to the patrons, with Maurice LaChappelle and Ace Freeman facing Angelo Leone and Jim Austeri, the villians.

Salem Takes Indian River Steeplechase

By the Associated Press

Delaware Park, Stanton, Del., June 25.—Groton Stable's Salem established himself as a strong pretender to the Nation's steeplechase crown today when he raced to a record-smashing triumph in the fourth running of the $6,000 Indian River Steeplechase.

Clearing the 16 stiff obstacles faultlessly and retaining his high speed on the flat throughout the 2½-miles "stakes course," Salem dashed under the wire all alone by six lengths after three of his original five opponents had found the exacting course too stiff to negotiate.

Dolly's Love was the runner-up and he beat his stablemate Ossabaw seven lengths. The heavily backed London Town, Beach Maiden and Mad Policy lost their riders at different points on the far-flung course.

Record Time

A lightning-fast field prevailed for the stake, second of three rich infield events scheduled during the current meeting and Salem completed the long journey in 4:7 2-5, 4-5 seconds better than the old mark made by Straw Boss in last year's renewal of the race.

Bright, seasonable weather prevailed for the program and the Greater number of the crowd of 7,000, including many steeplechase enthusiasts, made London Town an odds-on favorite. Salem was almost entirely overlooked and his payoff across the board was $19.80, $8.80, $4.70. The Dolly's Love-Ossabaw entry paid $3.60 place and show.

Mike Jacobs to Study D. C. Armory's Boxing Prospects

May Promote Fights Here Next Winter

Boxing Czar Tells Morgan He Plans Trip to D. C. Next Week for Survey

Mike Jacobs, who in addition to his role as czar of New York boxing has started calling signals for the District Boxing Commission, will fly down to the Capital next week on an inspection tour.

"Uncle Mike" will be here to inspect the new District National Guard Armory, Thomas P. Morgan, jr., member of the local ring body, announced.

The new armory, on East Capitol Street at the waterfront, is complete but for work on administration buildings and offices and will seat 20,000 persons for boxing in the immense drill hall.

Jacobs' desire to see this structure leads to the belief that he will not return to Washington with a fight show until next winter.

Giants Score Early, Beat Chicubs, 4-1

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 25.—The New York Giants punched across three runs in the first inning today and beat the Chicago Cubs, 4 to 1, for Rookie Bob Carpenter's fifth victory against one defeat.

The young right-hander's slow-ball pitching had the Cubs baffled all afternoon and the only run against him came in the second when Johnny Rucker raced in for Bob Sturgeon's liner and let it go through him for a triple. Stan Hack singled him home.

However, Hank Danning had hit a three-bagger with two on for the Giants in the first frame and scored himself on a fly to sew up the game. Carpenter singled New York's other run across in the fourth.

Alsab Captures Primer Stakes By Seven Lengths

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 25.—Alsab, the 2-year-old colt owned by Albert Sabath, of Chicago, raced to an easy triumph in the inaugural running of the $2,500 Primer Stakes before 10,000 at Arlington Park today.

Alsab, the $700 Good Goods yearling bargain that recently won the $5,000 Joliet Stakes at Lincoln Fields, started galloping around the stretch turn, caught the leaders less than a furlong from home and then drew out fast to win by seven lengths. Alsab earned $2,660. Valdina Farm's Valdina Orphan was second, while King Farm's Memphis edged out C. E. Hagyard's Emolument for third money.

A big favorite, Alsab paid $4.40, $3.60 and $3.20. Valdina Orphan returned $10.60 and $5.40, and Memphis paid $12.80 to show. With Bobby Vedder aboard, Alsab ran the 5½ furlongs in 1:04 4-5, three fifths of a second off the track record.

Kuhel on Business End of Triple Steal for Chisox in Fatal 13th

This was the sort of confusion at homeplate when Joey Kuhel (No. 3) scampered in on a triple steal that was staged by Chicago as Nats' Pitcher Sid Hudson was winding up in the thirteenth. Catcher Jake Early is trying to tag Kuhel, but Umpire Ormsby rushes in with a verdict of safe. No. 36 is Chisox third baseman, Bob Kennedy. Kuhel's slide gave Chicago a 2-0 victory.

Macks Score Rare Victory Over Tigers

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 25.—The Athletics won their second victory of the season over the Detroit Tigers today, sewing up a 6-to-4 decision by scoring three runs in the fourth inning. The Tigers had won eight out of their nine earlier games with the A's.

Shortstop Al Brancato's triple drove in the deciding runs in the fourth and sent Schoolboy Rowe to the showers. Dick Siebert opened the inning with a single. Frankie Hayes walked and Pete Suden singled, scoring Siebert. Then Brancato whaled out his triple, scoring Hayes and Suden.

Reds Defeat Phils Twice, 8 to 3 and 5 to 1

By International News Service

Cincinnati, June 25.—The Cincinnati Reds took a double-header from the Phillies today, 8-3 and 5-1.

Elmer Riddle gave the Phillies 11 hits but kept them fairly well scattered to hang up his seventh straight victory without a defeat this season.

Monty Pearson, the former Yankee veteran, made a strong comeback in the nightcap in a duel with Lefty Grissom, also a former Yank. Each gave only five hits. One of the hits off Pearson was Litwhiler's ninth-inning homer which robbed him of a shutout.

Surf-fishing is to many salt-water anglers what fly fishing for mountain trout is to the fresh-water angler. He is constantly busy, even when not catching fish.

Did you ever try surf-fishing? Many fresh-water anglers are turning their faces eastward toward the ocean, and finding what it is to breathe deeply the smell of bracing salt air. There are many reasons for this, one being the fact that so many of our trout streams are crowded, and a trout fisherman loves seclusion. Until some States begin improving and stocking some streams, not so popular at this time, will we find trout anglers more scattered and with the spirit of exploration.

One of the first things one does when approaching the beach is to scan the waters, noting the color of the water up to a point about 150 yards off shore. You note that in one place the waves are breaking farther out than at any other point. This marks a bar of sand, a darker stretch of water means a deep hole on the inshore side of it—a good place for fish to lie in wait for food washing off this bar through the action of the waves and tide. This is the spot to fish.

As for your tackle you should have a sturdy but springy split bamboo surf rod of six to seven foot tip, having an end guide and one intermediate guide and a male ferrule. For the tall man the longer and heavier the tip; the short man a shorter tip. The angler should carefully fit the tip to the butt section so the guides set in line with the reel increase the friction and cause unnecessary wear.

Next is the reel, which should be free spool, holding at least two hundred yards of line. The typical surf reel is equipped with a free-spool lever, which at the mere flip of the finger disengages the handle when casting. Another valuable attachment is the star drag, a brake for the spool which can be set at various tensions so there is an extra pull against the fish. We also like a leather thumb brake. The line is 9, 12 or 15 thread of the best grade outlynk linen. Remember that the lighter the line the easier it is to cast. It spools better and offers less resistance to the wind. Wet your line before making any long casts; it's not so apt to break. A line develops its full strength only when wet. As for lures and baits, well, here the surf-caster is just as big a crank as the fly fishermen are as to what are the best flies.

But we shall here suggest a few artificials which will take blues, striped bass or rockfish, and trout or weakfish. There are various types of squids which can be picked up in your sporting goods store. Japanese feathers are good but hard to cast.

These metal squids are cast out as far as you are able, and as soon as they hit the water start to retrieve them. Blues should be reeled somewhat faster than other species. A piece of pork rind or flannel strip attached to the hook end gives the squid a more lifelike appearance. Flannel of different colors helps sometimes. A leather rod butt rest is very important, as there is nothing more awkward than trying to hold a long-butted surf rod.

There are numerous live baits for surf fish: fresh squid for striped bass as well as bloodworms, soft shell crabs, live small eels, sometimes clams when nothing else is to be had. For channel bass, menhaden, clams, squid and mullet. Trout or weakfish, shrimp, shedder crabs, mullet and squid.

A good rig for bait fishing is a short tinned wire leader. We prefer a short one as it is not so apt to wirl around. Attach a swivel and connect to line with a leather thong; pyramid sinker with a swivel and fish finder attachment which allows the line to work freely through the eye as one plays the line out.

a hit off the big Chicago right hander until Vernon singled in the tenth was George Archie. On the first pitch of the game, Archie single to center and the Nats did not get another hit until eight innings later when Archie singled to left with one out in the ninth.

Meanwhile Hudson was doing a job on the White Sox. Taft Wright got a single on a drive which Lewis dropped in the second inning, and the Sox did not get another hit until the seventh when Wright double to right. It was Wright, who singled with two out in the ninth, who made Chicago's third hit.

Hudson was at his peak in the eleventh when he hurdled a two-base error by Third Baseman Archie that put him in deep trouble. Kolloway's grounder sifted through Archie and the Sox had a runner on second with none out. Kolloway was sacrified to third, and Hudson was faced by Wright, maker of all three White Sox hits to that point. Hudson disposed of Wright on a foul pop to Archie who reached into the field boxes for the ball, and escaped from the inning by ridding himself of Chapman on a fly to Cramer.

The Nats had runs in scoring position in the ninth, tenth and eleventh to no good effect. In the ninth, Archie singled and reached second with two out, but Lewis grounded to Rigney. In the tenth, Vernon singled and reached third with two out when Case beat out a hit, but Early was purposely passed and Hudson flied out.

Cramer singled with one out in the ninth and took third when Travis singled to right with two outs, but Rigney got out of the inning when Vernon drove a liner into Taft Wright's glove. The Nats couldn't get to first base in the twelfth and thirteenth, which is no way to win a ball game.

Pirates Lose To Dodgers; Two Ejected

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 25.—The Brooklyn Dodgers nosed out the Pittsburgh Pirates, 5 to 4, today to sweep their three-game series and stay within touching distance of the National League lead.

The game was a noisy, see-saw struggle from which Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers was ejected in the first inning for arguing with umpires, and followed by Manager Frank Frisch of the Pirates in the sixth inning and Coach Mike Kelly, of the same club, in the seventh for disputing decisions.

The Pirates pushed their way to a two-run lead while Lefty Ken Heintzelman pitched no-hit ball through the first four frames. Then the Dodgers bunched five of their nine hits for three runs in the fifth and sixth only to have Pittsburgh take the lead again with a run in the sixth and another in the seventh.

Finally in the eighth, Brooklyn made two runs stick on a single, doubles by Bill Herman and Cookie Lavagetto and a fly.

Credit for the victory went to Kirby Higbe, who relieved Hugh Casey in the seventh. It was his tenth triumph of the year, but the first in his career against the Pirates.

Atlanta, June 25 (AP).—The Atlanta Crackers, of the Southern League, today announced the purchase of Elmer Rambert, right-handed pitcher, from the Montreal Royals, of the International League.

The 24-year-old former Pittsburgh Pirate hustler, will report to the Crackers in Memphis Friday, Earl Mann, president of the Atlanta Baseball Club said. Purchase terms were not made public.

Atlanta recently announced the purchase of Right-hander Roxie Lawson from the Royals but he declined to report.

Tangled Wins Gazelle Stakes At Aqueduct

By the Associated Press

Aqueduct, N. Y., June 25.—Tangled, the glamor gal of the Greentree Stable, galloped seven other 3-year-old fillies to a fare-the-well as she added the forty-sixth Gazelle Stakes to her growing list of important triumphs here this afternoon.

Taking the lead in the run for positions, the flashy daughter of Sweeping Light—Elf Lock, with 124 pounds resting easily on her sturdy back, romped home by a handy length and a half to add $4,835 to her winning and pay the talent 1 to 2. She was clocked in 1:47 4-5 for the mile and a sixteenth breeze. Breckinridge Long's Nasca, slowest to leave the gate, was a game second by another length and a half. Marshall Field's Strange Device was third, a head before her stablemate, Up the Hill. A crowd of 10,979 cheered Tangled to her fourth straight success.

Top Filly

Tangled failed in the first two of her six 1941 starts, but her recent scores in the Top Flight Handicap and the Delaware Oaks (the latter in new track record time) have moved her up to a point where the turf world, at least temporarily, rates her over Level Best as the top filly. Level Best was an important absentee from the Gazelle field.

There was little to the running. Eddie Arcaro, after making sure his mount got to the front, took a snug hold. He nursed Tangled along under wraps. The speedy strange device found her master at "burning off" and finally gave up the chase as the fast closing Nasca staged her tardy rally. Cla Marion, the Pimlico Oaks winner, raced with the first flight for about 6 furlongs, then faded badly.

Mrs. Schluderberg Upsets Mrs. Stokes in State Golf Tourney

4 Baltimore Players Win In 1st Round

Mrs. Davy, Medalist, Mrs. Walper, Neblett Among State Winners At Chevy Chase Club

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The Baltimore delegation took over in the first round of the Maryland State Women's Championship yesterday at Chevy Chase and counted among its victims the defending champion, District titlist and tournament favorite—Mrs. Walter R. Stokes.

The Manor Club champion was a 5 and 4 victim of a former Baltimore City Champ from Five Farms, Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, who needed par in for a 76 when the match ended in surprise fashion on the fourteenth green.

The visitors filled four of the eight quarter-final berths as Gladys Greiner, the Elkridge entrant who is usually good for an upset or two, was the only member of the Monumental City delegation to meet defeat—at the hands of Mrs. Leo Walper.

Mrs. Davy Wins

Meanwhile Mrs. Myron Davy, medalist with an 80 on Tuesday, added several strokes to her score but it was good enough for a 6 and 5 victory over Mrs. L. G. Pray.

Mrs. Betty Meckley, after a third State title, hit the turn with a 5 up margin over Mrs. T. O. Brandon, the District medalist, and went on to win, 5 and 4, despite a pair of birdie deuces by the loser on the back nine. Mrs. Meckley's card included a three on the second hole, where she chipped in from off the green.

Mrs. T. F. Neblett completed the Washington representation in the championship flight, coming back in 41 to post a 1 up victory over Mrs. David Clark, the lone host club entry.

Close Victory

Jeanette Myers was the second of the Baltimoreans to report a victory, holding to a skimpy 1 up margin to score over Mrs. Richard Kreuzburg, Kenwood, on the 18th. They battled on virtually even terms all the way, while a stymie on the 18th did just that to Mrs. Kreuzburg's chances of sending the match to extra holes.

Elizabeth Bonthron, the schoolmarm from Baltimore, lost the first two holes to Mrs. A. A. McEntee, but by the ninth Miss Bonthron was two up, and she went on to win, 3 and 1. Mrs. Maurice Glick, of Woodholme, followed with an 8 and 6 triumph over Mrs. Henry Goodman, of Woodmont.

Mrs. Stokes gave no indication of what was to follow as she won the first hole against Mrs. Schluderberg in the day's big upset. But the lead was short lived, as in quick succession the Baltimorean won the second with a par, the third by the stymie route and the fourth with a birdie, to go 2 up. A shot which barely caught the trap on the sixth hole cost Mrs. Stokes another hole and she was 3 down. The way Mrs. Schulderberg was scoring yesterday, she was in no mood to lose a 3-hole lead.

Today's quarter-finals find Mrs. Davy, finalist last year, who has earned new respect among her golfing cohorts and is now labeled as the one to beat for the title, up against the feminine member of the golfing Walpers. Mrs. Walper had one of the best out nines of the day in turning Miss Greiner, 4 up, and winning 5 and 4.

Mrs. Neblett, the former Louisiana State champion, will be favored to make her first semifinal appearance locally against Miss Myers, while Mrs. Schluderberg will have a chance for upset No. 2, against Mrs. Mackley. The fourth match will be an all-Baltimore affair, Miss Bonthron vs. Mrs. Glick.

Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, tournament chairman from the District, announced Saturday's finals will start at 10 A. M. instead of 1 p. m., as previously announced.

The Junior Golfers Take Over and Crown a New Champion—Tom Brandon

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, June 25.—So much wonderful misinformation is coming out of the propaganda department of the Private Bummy Davis-Fritzie Zivic fight that we'd be neglecting our duty if we didn't let you read it first before it fulfills its destiny and winds up with the other mimeographic masterpieces in the wastebasket.

CONSIDINE

Did you know, for instance, that referees like to work in the same ring with patriotic Private Davis? Well, sir, it says so right in black and white in a little memorandum from our friend Doc Morris, currently waxing lyrical over Private Davis at his fistic camp. "They like to work a Davis match," the good Doc allows, "because from the time he made his Garden debut to hammer out a win over Benny Rubano, Bummy has never put the officials on the spot."

That loud moan you just heard probably emanated from the pit of Billy Cavanagh, the referee who had the cherished role of working with Private Davis the night Private Davis sank 11 straight uppercuts into the lower groin of Zivic in their first fight. This was after Zivic, who comically emerged from that fight as an aggrieved martyr, had thumbed Bummy in his peepers and given him a case of secondary flat feet by tramping on his sizable dogs. Cavanagh's face that night will haunt us to our grave, for never has a referee been more filled with dismay and anguish than in that mockery of a boxing contest.

We think you could pull a Dewey dragnet over the fight game and not snag one referee who wouldn't rather retire from the pastime than work with Bummy Davis—unless he could be given a written guarantee that Army life has changed the tough lug into a model citizen.

It is interesting also to learn that Zivic "Will ask the New York State Athletic Commission to instruct the referee not to halt the bout, no matter what happens." You can be pretty certain that Zivic will do no such thing, or mean no such thing if he does it, and that if he is not too busy giving our favorite patriot the works during the fight he and his manager will be the first to yell foul when the famous military figure belts him round the belt.

We think the two guys should be billed honestly. They are a couple of 20-minute eggs who'll never generate a gill of the milk of human nicety. They did everything but bite, the last time they fought, and after the amenities are dispensed with they'll probably do the same this time. Davis was disqualified by Cavanagh and barred for life by the commission after his stirring exhibition of gutter fighting in the first bout. Under a strict interpretation of the Marquis of Queensberry rules, Zivic should have been disqualified even before Bummy was, for gouging and the other trade tricks of which this crafty veteran is complete master.

As an old public pulse feeling, we think Jacobs' propaganda department is making one of its few blunders in trying to delouse Bummy, and to place the robes of sterling sportsmanship over the broken-nosed, muffin-eared head of Fritzie the champ. They are fighting partly for charity. Davis has been given furlough from Battery D, Sixty-ninth Coast Artillery Antiaircraft because Jacobs has guaranteed Army officials that he'll give a minimum of $10,000 to the Army relief fund. There is also a percentage clause, whereby that worthy charity—which cares for the needy families Army men left behind them—will gain even more dough if the fight draws over a certain number of fans.

If the public could be assured that the coming fight between them would be as dirty as the first one, we believe that more people would show up at the Polo Grounds that night than appeared for the Louis-Conn match.

It is therefore to be regretted that the propaganda unit cannot point out the fact that Army life and chow has probably made Private Davis only that much more ornery, and that the blood poisoning Zivic recently had in his arm has settled through the rest of his system and made him more venomous than ever. If this kind of mimeographing went out from Jacobs office, it would mean much more dough for the deserving charity, would strike a new note for honesty in ballyhoo, and mean more thousands in the purses of these two selfless patriots who will risk life and limb in sole interest of sweet charity—and 30 per cent of the net.

Tom Brandon Wins Junior Golf Crown

The new junior golf champion of the District is 17-year-old Tom Brandon, a Wilson High graduate with Harvard ideas, who posted a 153-stroke total for 36 holes yesterday at Indian Spring to top a field of 28 by five strokes.

The rangy, blond youngster, whose dad is a low 70-shooter at Columbia and whose mother won the medal in the District Women's Championship, was the morning leader with a 75 and he added an afternoon 7 for his winning total.

Young Brandon has been a resident here for less than a year. He was finalist in the Riverside (Calif.) Club Championship while his mother was women's champion of the same club. Tom was 16 at the time. He played the championship Columbia course in 70 strokes, level par, lastt week.

CVass Second

Second was Kenwood's George Vass, jr., the G. W. freshman golf captain, who had two 39s for a 78 in the morning and a back nine of 37 in the afternoon but an out nine of 43 ruined his title chances.

Winner of the trophy in the under-16 1/years-of-age class was Norman Manders, 14-year-old Alice Deal Junior High student who had 80-81, 161, to the 163 of Charlie Price, host club entry and Georgetown Prep golf team member.

Logan Manders, Norman's older brother, chipped in from off the edge of the thirty-sixth green but he was still one shot short of a tie with Vass for the runner-up berth. Dick Meyer, the Georgetown U. golfer and Manor Club champion, was next with 81-79, 160.

The defending titlist and Tuesday's Maryland State Junior winner, Bill Cassedy, was off his stick all day and finished with 81-82, 163.

Earle Skinker Places Third In Schoolboy Golf Qualifying

Special Dispatch to The Post

Greenwich, Conn., June 25.—Donald Kling, representing the Peddle School of Highstown, N. J., won medal honors in the Eastern Interscholastic Golf Tournament here today as Earle Skinker, the Devitt Prep player from Washington and first day leader, skidded to third place.

Kling added a 73 to his opening 74 score for a 147 total to beat out James Vanderhoff, of Blair, by a single stroke. The latter had 75—73.

Skinker, labeled the tournament dark-horse, was one of the first off the tee this morning and he never reached his first day's form, turning in a 40—38—78 for a 150 total, third best of the starting field. Skinker's 72 was low by two shots on Tuesday.

Lawrenceville Prep won the team championship by 41 strokes over Peddle with a 620 score.

George Molloy, former Bannockburn champion, Roy Smith, D. C. public links champ, W. W. Seay and Bobby Bowers are other potential qualifiers from this city.

Army Gives Bonura Athletic Position

Camp Shelby, Miss., June 25 (AP).—Capt. V. N. Rollo, reception center adjutant, announced today that Zeke Bonura, former major league first baseman inducted into the service June 19, would remain at Camp Shelby as assistant to the athletic officer.

The big, jovial Bonura who started his baseball career in his home town, New Orleans, covering first base for the pelicans in the Southern Association, came straight to the service from Minneapolis, of the American Association.

McINTIRE

Like the brook, "Lefty" goes on and on.

"Way back in 1917, a little matter of 24 years ago, "Lefty" McIntire first bent his arm in the direction of a local sandlot batter. And down the years he's been out there on the mound, pitching for a total of 102 teams.

Now "Lefty," admitting 38 years of life, says vaguely when asked how many more seasons he expects to pitch—"Well, maybe three or four. Maybe more than that. The arm still feels like a million."

"Lefty" is the daddy of all Washington sandlotters, from the point of service. He has tried brief invasions of the minor leagues—Orlando, of the Florida State League; Martinsburg, of the Blue Ridge League, and even Milwaukee, of the American Association—but for the most part his heart is with Washington's skinned infields and weedy gardens.

Born in this city bearing the name Robert Lee McIntire, "Lefty" first hurled for the Aztec Juniors at the age of 14. His father, an outfielder with the Rosslyn Steel nine, helped the budding moundsman no little. Then began the team-streak which several years ago earned a notice from Ripley, of "Believe it——" fame, when McIntire had pitched for a total of 74 clubs.

"Lefty" started this year with exactly 100 various managers and teams behind him, his work with the H. & J. Construction nine, of the Washington Post-Industrial League, and Palace A. C. of the Washington-Virginia League comprising his 101st and 102d tie-ups.

Though his feats, many of which have been disfigured by retelling, are numerous and brilliant, here are a few of the outstanding: He pitched a no-hitter, his only one, for Treasury against Agriculture back in 1923 . . . One man reached first on an error . . . He pitched 56 consecutive innings late in the 1920's for Georgetown A. A. without giving up a base on balls . . . At the same time he turned in his most productive week—pitching 6 games in 7 days . . . He outpitched "Lefty" Gomez, of the Yanks, in a 10-inning game while with Milwaukee . . . Gomez was with St. Paul at the time . . .

BILL BURNETT.

Conn Referee For Baltimore Bouts Tonight

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 25.—Principals in the heavyweight show that will inaugurate outdoor boxing at the Municipal Stadium tomorrow night wound up their training routines today and were declared in the "pink."

The program arranged for the big bowl by Promoters Jack Laken and Fred Squires is topped by three ten-round heavyweight bouts and in addition Billy Conn, latest victim of Champion Joe Louis, will be on hand as a guest referee.

Bill Poland, of New York, will meet Harry Bobo, Pittsburgh Negro, in the main attraction and, as in the Louis-Conn fight, it will be a case of a good big man—Bobo—against a good little man—Poland.

The other heavyweight bouts will be Pat Comiskey, of Newark, against Bob Smith, Detroit Negro, and Lee Savold, of St. Paul, against King Kong, Baltimore Negro.

Two six-round preliminaries complete the card.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 25.—Quill, owned by Mrs. H. R. Jenkins, of Charles Town, turned in the best race of his turf career this afternoon and bounded off with the York Purse, best offering on the Wednesday card. Driving around on the outside of Transday, Quill took command with a quarter-mile to go and drew out in the stretch run.

A length and a half off the winner was W. B. Pendlebury's Transday, the heavily played favorite in the field of six. In a photo for third money, five additional lengths behind Quill, J. E. Colvin's Lyde took the decision from C. O. Ferguson's Kingoo.

Quill Had the Punch

Jockey Albert Vesselli did the riding on Quill and the 6-year-old gelding paid a $13.20 mutuel. The battle was over a route of a mile and a quarter and the winner was clocked in 2:10 over a good track. The racing strip dried out during the program and the weather overhead was the best of the meeting.

Lyde, Kingoo and Transday had innings in front of the pack. However, Transday's stay at the top was a brief one. Vesselli put Quill to a hard drive and the gelding moved up on even terms with the favorite. The rider then steadied Quill and in the straightaway he asked for punch and got it. Palumbo worked hard to keep Transday going, but the horse wilted under him.

Bletzacker Graduated

Jockey Martin Bletzacker won the second race with War Scare, a $5 favorite. The victory sent the rider out of the apprentice class and started a $7.80 daily double. Apprentice Clarence Wright put the finishing touches on the transaction by scoring with Gold Sweep in the third race.

Bletzacker came back to ride his second winner of the day and the first since he lost his "bug." He gave Lena Girl a hard ride to bring the mare home in front of Jungle Moon and Caidon.

Porter's Cap Ill; Debut Is Cancelled

Los Angeles, June 25 (AP).—Porter's Cap came up with a slight temperature today and his summer debut at Hollywood Park was canceled.

He was slated to have run in the feature race against six rival 3-year-olds in preparation for the approaching $25,000 Hollywood Derby.

Dear Al:

Martin Bletzacker, Somerset, Ohio, boy, graduated from the apprentice ranks yesterday when he piloted War Scare to victory in the second race. Ware Scare was his fortieth winner. Having lost his apprentice allowance, his mounts during the day had to pick up the five pounds. Martin broke his leg at New Orleans 2 years ago but came back strong and has been a popular rider hereabouts. In his first race as a full-fledged jockey, "Blitzkrieg," as he is called, had to bring all his riding skill into action when Seplin, his mount, stumbled and all but fell. Jockey Willie Kelly became ill after riding in the first race, which accounts for him being off other mounts, including Clymene. Apprentice Al Bocson went to Delaware Park yesterday to confer with Cy Butler who has his contract. Patsy Grant went to Wheeling Tuesday and returned to accept mounts yesterday. Jockey Joe O'Malley's injured hand is as good as new and he wants horses to ride. The books for the Hagerstown meeting, opening July 8, are out. Brother Bester has them dolled up in a glossy green cover. Art Brown was up yesterday in all his glory. Outrider Mike Daly got a big hand when he captured Goantell after the mare had tossed Jockey Johnny Shanks following the finish of the second event. It has been 25 days since somebody moved the phoney flamingoes in the infield. They are haunting me again. Arthur Hullcoat has shipped The Fop, Bay Acre, Kissem to Delaware Park. He sent three horses to Belair. They are Macie Margaret, Settler and Ground Acre, a 2-year-old. A. Derrico has sold Wine Wrack to H. W. Smith at private terms. Kelly's Lad and Vestate arrived from Suffolk Downs to campaign here. They belong to Mrs. Danny Shea. Snooks Winters put in an appearance with his velour hunting coat. Ace of Trumps was claimed yesterday by Mrs. McNey for $800. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—SIR JEROME gets 9 pounds from Mowmet and, at the weights, I believe the first named will take the main portion of the purse. MOWMET has done everything asked, but 125 pounds is high weight on any horse. OYSTER BAR, on the reserve list, may be better than that recent race.

Second race—MY FIRST has the speed to beat this gang to the first turn and is likely to stick it out under Palumbo's handling. Comes off a winning effort at a shorter route. NATIONAL likes this distance and has speed. SCULLERY MAID should close briskly.

Third race—REAL BOY can better that last. Promises to do a lot of running if taken off the reserve list. WAR SORROW is green but has speed and is dangerous. GRADATIM to take care of the others.

Fourth race—WALE SIGNAL is tossed in this with 105 pounds and appears capable of holding these safe. FRANK H. turned in a smart victory last out and is a threat. TAVERN for the minor award.

Fifth race—GARDEN POOL is as sharp as the proverbial tack now and gets my call in this rather open affair. PURPORT gets light weight and promises to be a factor. DELHI DAN to account for the third money.

Sixth race—SCOOTIE has excellent time over the abbreviated sprint route. Promises to do a lot of running and I'm going to string along. LAST BET is speedy and dangerous. CLAY HILL seems overweighted at 123 pounds.

Seventh race—SUMMER STOCK gets an inside post position and promises to be a keen factor if not the winner. I'm going to take my chances with this one. BLOX is fit and will be right in there knocking. BRIGHT GEM won at the first asking here.

Eighth race—BIG STEEL has been rested and will be hard to beat at this distance. PAMUNKEY and SOME GROUCHER to fill out the money bracket.

Sub race—If this event is used, I'll take COUNSUELLO, BLUE COVERT and GAY PRANK.

Best bet—Scottie.

Stocks Show Stability in Local Trade

By S. Oliver Goodman

Fluctuations of securities listed on the Washington Stock Exchange were narrow and irregular in the first six months, a survey by The Post showed last night. Of the 22 most active issues, 12 displayed gains while the remainder were lower.

Relative stability of local securities, it was pointed out, is a healthy condition indicating that the stocks and bonds are mostly in investment hands rather than in speculative quarters. Every stock listed on the Washington exchange is a dividend-payer and apparently holders are interested in a steady return, not a profit on a quick turnover.

Noteworthy on the upside during the first six months were Liberty National with a gain of $5 a share; National Savings & Trust, up $4; Garfinckel preferred, up $2.25, and Riggs National, up $2.50.

Following is a list of the 22 most active issues on the Washington Stock Exchange and their comparative prices (1941 based on latest closing quotation):

Schram Defends Speculation, Lauds Regulation by SEC

Newly-Elected Head Of Big Board Makes First Public Talk

By the Associated Press

New York, June 25.—Emil Schram, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and president-elect of the New York Stock Exchange, tonight defended the speculator as a necessary element in the national exchange that the market's only Exchange that the market's only problem was how best "to serve that public interest which is the reason for its existence."

Schram's selection, May 6, to head the Nation's largest securities mart drew expressions of surprise in Wall Street, both because of his close association with the New Deal and because he had never been connected with the securities business. Tonight he made his first appearance before a large gathering of Exchange men, as he addressed a dinner of the Association of Stock Exchange Firms.

"The answer to the (exchange's) problem," Schram told his audience, "lies in the operation of the Exchange not only as a business enterprise—but .in the manner of a public utility as well."

SEC Is Praised

Of Government regulation of the securities business, long in controversy between Wall Street and Washington, Schram said:

"I earnestly believe the Securities and Exchange Commission's regulations, together with your own, have afforded that strong measure of protection which is essential to the public interest.

"It is illogical to suppose that the S. E. C. is intent upon either the destruction of the exchange or the strangulation of securities markets.

"The S. E. C. appreciates . . . the vital position which the exchange holds in our economy. The purpose of the S. E. C. is the same today as it was at its inception: To require full and fair disclosure of the character of securities sold and to prevent inequitable and unfair practices in security markets."

Of speculation, the excess of which was avowedly the target of much New Deal legislation covering securities trading, Schram said:

"I fully appreciate the constructive influence of speculation by informed people who can afford to assume risks. That kind of speculation unquestionably contributes to market stability and thus serves the interest of investors. One need only recall the early history of our great industrial empires to realize the important role played by risk money in the economic growth of the country."

Not a Conservative

Concerning his personal economic views, which have been a major question mark in Wall Street minds since his selection for the Stock Exchange job six weeks ago, Schram said:

"I have never been a radical. Neither do I consent to the name conservative—especially if conservative is defined as 'one who will not look at the new moon out of respect for the ancient and honorable institution, the old one.'

"I do not subscribe to the theory of Government in business, except as an emergency measure. Some of you fear competition from Government in the investment field. I do not share those apprehensions. There has been too much talk about 'the' Government, and not enough talk about 'our' Government. Today business and Government have become a team in the defense effort. From this relationship a finer understanding is sure to result.

"Free markets are a proper and necessary adjunct of that Democratic system to the preservation of which the country has now consecrated itself. I regard the Stock Exchange, therefore, as an institution whose continued vitality is of national concern."

Schram also told the stock exchange men, whose business, despite the industrial boom caused by the arms program, has been dragging at the slowest pace in several decades:

No Panacea Offered

"I am no Aaladdin with a magic lamp, no Moses promising to lead you out of the wilderness. I offer no panacea for all your ills. But I do say there is no problem facing the exchange today which we can not solve together by intelligent effort and earnest endeavor. Suppose we make the resolution tonight that we apply the same resourcefulness, the same ingenuity and the same energy to this business as are being put forth by the managers of the companies listed on your exchange. Is there any doubt what the result would be?"

Robert Stott, chairman of the board of governors of the exchange, and chief policy-making officer for his fellow members, to the audience:

"We will have a rare opportunity, when Mr. Schram takes office, to prove that we are serious-minded business men and that we can work together in the interest of the public and in the interest of the exchange. But if we miss this opportunity—and in my opinion we have missed many in the past—we will have no one but ourselves to blame."

Steel Output Rate Crosses 100% Level

By the United Press

New York, June 25.—The Nation's steelmaking rate crossed the 100 per cent of capacity level this week as the new phase of the European war indicated "intensification of the effort to aid Great Britain and build up our own defense," the Iron Age magazine said today in its weekly summary.

Steel operations were estimated at 100.5 per cent of theoretical capacity, the first time this year that the rate has exceeded the 100-per cent mark and an increase of ½ point over last week.

"Lines are being drawn tighter in supplies of steel and other metals on those not engaged in defense activities," the trade publication asserted. "Some manufacturing plants have already been forced to curtail operations because of inability to obtain sufficient steel and a further tendency in this direction appears to be inevitable over the coming months."

Curtailment in the automobile industry "may be considerably more than the 20 per cent originally agreed upon," the magazine said, "With wide strip mills now operating at 50 per cent or more on plate tonnage, the inability of the motor car makers to obtain a sufficient supply of sheets and strip will in itself dictate further drastic reduction of automobile production schedules."

Tsk! Emil Schram 'Forgets' Dignity Of Exchange Post

New York, June 25 (AP).—Tall, solemn-looking Emil Schram, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, led off with this one tonight as he addressed his first Wall Street audience since he was picked as president of the New York Stock Exchange:

"An Illinois farm boy, looking for a crossing watchman's job, was asked what he would do if two trains came along at 60 miles an hour, head-on. The anwer was something like this:

"'I'd blow my whistle. If my whistle was out of order, I'd take off my red undershirt and flag the trains. If it was night I'd wave my lantern. If there was no oil in the lantern, I'd holler for my sister.'

"'But why your sister?' he was asked.

"'So she could see the damnedest wreck he ever saw in her life.'"

Said Schram:

"Some have said the stock exchange is at the crossroads. I do not anticipate any head-on collision. Besides, I haven't any sister."

A. T. & T. Work Will Cost Over $234,000,000

By the Associated Press

New York, June 25.—Walter S. Gifford, president of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., today predicted the company's expansion program would call for more money than the $234,000,000 to be raised by sale of a convertible debenture issue.

Speaking at a special stockholders meeting, which approved the proposed issue, Gifford said the company expected to need a great deal of money this year and possible for two more years.

"If we want some more money next year, and we will want some at the rate we are going," Gifford said, "we could get another $100,000,000 whenever the conversion privilege was exercised and thus we would be raising something over $300,000,000 by selling the present convertible issue."

The new debentures will be convertible into common stock by payment of the difference between the $100 face value and the convertible price set for the stock.

The stockholders approved the new debentures by a vote of 13,991,142 to 152,369.

Gifford said the company still was uncertain as to whether the new money would be used to take up $95,000,000 in 5½ per cent debentures callable this fall.

"We may use some of that or some of the money on hand," he said, adding, "the company has more than $100,000,000 in its treasury."

Buoyancy of Aircraft Stocks Steadies List; Trade Limited by Uncertainty of War Trend

New York, June 25.—A stubborn resistance by aircrafts to lethargic downturns experienced in other sections of the list steadied the stock market today and resulted in actual, though slight, gains at the close.

The aviation issues moved up as much as 2 points, some defense manufacturing shares followed to lesser degrees and, at the very last, a few rails and steels assumed plus signs.

The Associated Press average of 60 selected stocks gained .1 of a point at 41.7. The turnover was 425,730 shares, compared with 442,580 yesterday. Of the 680 issues traded, 265 advanced, 222 declined and 193 were unchanged from yesterday.

Volume was limited by the great uncertainty as to the course of the Russo-German campaign, on which probably depends the next phase of the Battle of Britain. Reports that the Russians were showing a bit stiffer resistance and had got some of their long-boasted air force into action aided buying sentiment.

New 1941 highs were set by two specialties, Lehigh Valley Coal preferred and Universal Pictures preferred, the latter adding 6½ points to the spectacular runup of 7 points achieved yesterday.

Other shares which improved included Boeing, Douglas, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Sperry, Bendix, Santa Fe, New York Central, Southern Pacific, General Electric, Dow Chemical, Dupont, Union Carbide, International Harvester, U. S. Steel, Mack Truck, Western Union, Warner Bros. and Paramount. Losers included General Motors, U. S. Rubber, American Can, Kennecott, American Smelting, American Telephone and Consolidated Edison.

In the curb, where transactions totaled 69,000 shares compared with 70,000 yesterday, gains were made by Le Tourneau, Bell Aircraft, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Todd Shipyards and Sherwin Williams.

A slow but steady advance marked today's bond market. The four domestic groups in the Associated Press averages gained .1 of a point each and the foreign department attained a new 1941 high at 47.0, up .5, mostly because of a sharp rise in bonds of Norway and Japan. Turnover expanded to $9,082,700, par value, from $7,622,000 on Tuesday and was the best since May 12.

The performance of Japanese and Norwegian bonds was accomplished on only a moderate turnover and was associated by some with European war developments. It was noted Japanese issues were in good demand at London. Gains ranged from 3¾ to 5¼ points. German municipal issues were absent from the tape after Tuesday's severe slump. The Government loans were a shade lower.

Commodities' Uneven Moves Tend Lower

By the Associated Press

Commodity markets moved irregularly yesterday in an apparent continuation of Tuesday's reaction.

Cotton lost 25 to 50 cents a bale and cottonseed oil followed with a decline of .02 to .15 a cent a pound.

Santos coffee lost .05 to .11 of a cent a pound, cocoa was off .06 to .08 of a cent a pound and hides were .05 to .06 a pound lower.

On the credit side were wool tops, up .10 of a cent a pound, Straits tin, .10 to .12½ cents a pound higher, and sugar, with domestic unchanged to .02 cent a pound higher and the world contract .01 to .03½ cent better.

In Chicago wheat closed unchanged to ⅛ cent higher after recovering from losses of nearly a cent a bushel and corn was unchanged to ¼ cent a bushel up.

The Associated Press index of wholesale prices of 35 basic commodities slipped to 88.47 per cent of parity compared with Tuesday's 88.63.

Defense Bond Questionnaire

Q. What happens if I suddenly need the money I put into a defense savings bond?

A. You can cash your bond at any time, after 60 days, for the full amount paid, plus any interest due you.

Q. Do many bond owners cash their bonds?

A. No. People want to help arm America against all attacks. In many cases, people are putting every cent they can spare into defense bonds and stamps. Some are doing this by asking employers or banks to withold part of their salaries in order to buy these bonds or stamps for them.

Note.—To purchase defense bonds and stamps, go to the nearest post office or bank, or write for information to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington.

Silver Spring Fire Leaves Five Homeless

A family of five was made homeless yesterday by a fire that practically destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. William N. Johnson at Hollywood Park, Silver Spring, Md. The two-story frame structure was burned to the ground.

Mrs. Elizabeth F. Johnston, the wife, was preserving cherries and had gone to the front porch to speak to a neighbor. When she turned back to the house it was in flames. It is believed the cherries boiled over on the oil stove and caused an explosion.

A neighbor's child ran more than a mile to the nearest telephone to summon fire apparatus. Silver Spring and Sandy Spring Volunteer Fire Departments arrived at the same time. The fire had gained too much headway and the firemen were unable to save the house, but kept it from spreading to nearby woods.

Johnson, who is an employe of the Burnt Mills (Md.) filtration plant of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, said he thought the damage would be more than $3,000, partially covered by insurance.

All of the clothing and furniture of the family was destroyed in the flames and they were left with only the clothes they were wearing. The father was at work when the fire broke out and did not get home until the house had been reduced to a smouldering ruin.

The Johnsons have three children, William N. Johnson, jr., 12; Charles A. Johnson, 9, and June Elizabeth Johnson, 8, all of whom were visiting neighbors when the fire broke out. William managed to save his bicycle.

Johnson had been remodeling the house and had built it from a bungalow into a two-story house, but had not finished the upstairs rooms. The family was being cared for by neighbors last night.

Filling Defense Jobs Goal, CCC Official Says

Dr. Howard W. Oxley, director of camp education for the Civilian Conservation Corps, said yesterday that the main purpose of the CCC during the present emergency is to prepare men for national defense jobs. He spoke to delegates of the seventh annual CCC educational conference being held this week at the University of Maryland.

"Never before, since CCC work was started, has there been such an opportunity for enrollees to get well paying jobs in industry," he stated, adding that there will be need for an additional 1,500,000 trained men in industry within the next 18 months.

Industries and the men they will need be listed as: Aircraft, 408,400; shipbuilding, 328,900; machine tools and ordnance, 291,000; other enterprises, 484,600.

Others who spoke were Col. R. B. Bush, war representative for the CCC; Harry Kylie, Department of Agriculture; William Lancaster, Department of the Interior, and L. J. Macfendon, supply officer for the Third Corps Area.

On tomorrow's program will be included panel and group discussion of "How to go about organizing and starting operation of a class in training for national defense industry."

Frederick Ban On Fireworks More Drastic Than State

Frederick, Md., June 25 (AP).—The kids probably will complain bitterly. Nevertheless, the noise and clatter most likely will be missing from Frederick's observance of Independence Day.

The city's antifireworks ordinance, recently adopted by the mayor and board of aldermen, is more drastic than the regulations promulgated by State Insurance Commissioner John B. Gontrum. The local ruling supersedes the State commissioner's regulations.

Even though Judge Eli Frank in Baltimore City Circuit Court ruled that Gontrum cannot inforce that part of his regulations relating to "sparklers and other fireworks which attain only visible and non-explosive display by combustion," he further held that the banning of "explosive" displays by the State does not apply to any county or municipality which has adopted laws covering the same matter.

In Frederick's ordinance the term "combustible" is used. City Attorney Edward J. Smith interprets that to apply to the sale or discharge of any fireworks except in special cases.

Arrangements now are being made for a municipal display in Baker Park the night of the Fourth.

A hearing has been set for July 7, before Judge Henry O'Neill, in Hyattsville Police Court.

J. J. Don't Let Defense Cut Funds For Schools, Md. P.-T. A. Told

Mrs. G. R. Clements, president of the Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers, said yesterday that "no defense program should be allowe dto touch any school budget," in an address given before delegates t othe Maryland State Parent-Teacher Conference at the University of Maryland.

She added that the recommendation of the Maryland School Survey Commission advocating a 12-year school program instead of the present 11-year program, should be upheld by the P.-T.A.

Dr. Thomas C. Pullen, representing the State department of education, said his department "is in full accord with the 12-year program."

He also quoted the findings of the survey commission, which listed Maryland as ranking twelfth among States in ability to support an education system, "but twenty-fourth in proportion of State income allotted for the maintenance of the educational system."

The educational conference will continue throughout the weke.

Albert Warner, C. B. S. news commentator, speaking in the "World Today" forum at the university summer school, said:

"If you are on the edge of war, certain restrictions are as inevitable in the field of writing news as they are in the economic life and our personal careers—the one thing that we should be sure of is that we, as a Nation, never lose the power and the will to shake off these restrictions when we believe the time for them is past."

with Glynn

People usually seen but not heard will have their chance to do the unusual tonight—they'll be heard throughout the Nation.

They're a group of Washington newspaper correspondents whose bylines you see in the papers every day. And, as a special Washington angle, in view of the fact that Prof. Quiz is in town, presenting quizzes like mad at all the Army, Navy and Marine camps in the vicinity, they're to appear on the Professor's broadcast over WJSV and the Columbia network at 9:15 p. m.

The Professor's broadcast is coming from the auditorium of the National Press Club and the very special journalistic guests are to be Lee Carson, of International News Service and King Features; Doris Fleeson, of the New York Daily News and the Washington Times-Herald; John O'Brien, of the Philadelphia Inquirer and president of the White House Correspondents Association; Ray Tucker, of the McClure Syndicate, and Representative Martin J. Kennedy, of New York. Representative Kennedy, of course, is not a newspaperman, but he used to be chairman of a school board in New York City and should know a lot of the answers, too.

As a local journalistic note, it should be pointed out that "Prof. Quiz," the granddaddy of the hosts of quiz shows which have sprung up since, was born at WJSV in 1936—the idea of John Heiney, now director of sales promotion for the station.

Contract Bridge

We hear today from a young man, Frederick Bellinger, of Princeton University, who with skill, dash and a little support from the enemy managed to take 12 tricks on a hand

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Double	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 4 ♣.

he had bid only to two. Young Bellinger and his partner should have arrived at game but let the bidding die while day dreaming about the impending "math" exam.

Outside of the forces in clubs, declarer has little to fear. Even with the kindest defense it is difficult to see how he can avoid losing at least two tricks—the ace of trumps and the ace of diamonds; but this is how it went:

"This hand was played during our exam schedule and may exhibit the confusion of mind in which we are at the time. My partner, North, opened; East doubled and after my partner raised my spade bid one, I quite naturally passed.

"A club was opened and I did not play the ten for some unknown reason. When East ducked I went after the hearts and with the most excellent break (West coming up with the queen) managed to discard my remaining clubs. After ruffing a club in the closed hand I played the king of spades and eventually knocked out the ace.

"At that point East led a club, bringing the nine of spades from my hand. West, however, neglected to overtrump and six odd rolled in, as Uncle Bing is wont to say."

15,000 Boys, Girls Attend St. Paul Mass

By the Associated Press

St. Paul, June 25.—Hundreds of youngsters wilted under a blazing sun as 15,000 boys and girls chanted responses at a Pontifical High Mass for children celebrated here today at the Ninth National Eucharistic Congress.

An estimated 500 persons, none seriously affected, required treatment at hospital quarters at the State Fair Grounds, congress center.

At the peak of the emergency, police called out eight ambulances and nearly a score of emergency equsd cars from the Twin Cities to transport the victims to shelters on the fair grounds. The Weather Bureau said the temperature in the open undoubtedly was around the 100 mark. The official noon reading was 91.

The children, from 75 schools in a 30-mile area about the twin cities, gathered for the occasion of re-firming their belief in the Eucharist. They were in a body in the track infield, the girls in dresses of white and blue with ornamental sashes of gold and green, to sing responses to the chants of the celebrant, the Most Rev. Edward Mooney, Archbishop of Detroit.

Church officials estimated the attendance at 100,000, the largest to date of the four-day congress which ends tomorrow.

The Most Rev. Francis J. Spellman, Archbishop of New York, in a sermon, told the multitude of parents and children that only love, faith, and Christian hope could vanquish in today's war-torn world the hate, paganism and despair with which civilization is confronted. He said the world had lost peace because of the flouting of the ten commandants.

A group of sectional meetings in the twin cities tonight centered upon the problems of youth. The Rev. Daniel A. Lord, S.J., of St. Louis, told one youth group that sacrifice is "the only way in which genuine happiness comes to the world."

"Who can measure the happiness that has come to all of us through the sacrifice of our mothers, the courage of those men who laid down their lives fr their country, the devotion of those scientists who sacrificed leisure, pleasure, time, and life itself to give the world a new rung in the ladder we laboriously climb? Through sacrifice you mak the world happy."

In another address to the Holy Name Society, the most Rev. Robert E. Lucey, archbishop of San Antonio, criticized "those who lecture us about the right of the American wage earner to make a living without having to pay tribute to a labor organization."

"To say that the American Labore should be free to stand alone and free to work alone is to say that he should be free to accept less than a just wage and free to starve," declared the archbishp.

Joss' Stories Dont' Agree, State Contends

By the Associated Press

Bath, Me., June 25.—The State produced testimony today intended to show that Dr. Merrill E. Joss, 34, on trial for wife murder, had given varying descriptions of the drug addict he believed might have beaten 35-year-old Luverne Harris Joss to death in their Richmond home March 27.

Charles W. Messenger, Sagadahoc County's sheriff, said Joss had told him the bearded, unkempt stranger was wearing a lumberman's jacket with a bright buckle when Joss refused the man narcotics less than an hour before Mrs. Joss, also a physician, was killed.

Lloyd W. Umberhind, the Richmond police chief, testified yesterday Joss told him that the man wore a dark topcoat.

As the trial's third day drew to a close—Attorney Gen. Frank I. Cowan introduced a round stone, sharp on one edge, which the sheriff said resembled one found in Joss' cellar the night of the slaying. Messenger could make no positive identification of the stone.

Whether the State would claim the stone to be a murder weapon—police have charged the former Jackson, Ala., woman's head was battered repeatedly against the cellar's walls, floor and stairs—Cowan did not indicate. But he drew from Messenger testimony that the stone except for blood spatterings, was clean, whereas the floor was dirty.

The slender, prematurely bald Joss conferred often with his counsel. He smiled at times, and occasionally jotted notes.

CitizenBacking Needed, Prison Chaplain'sTold

If a prison chaplain's work is to be successful, it must be properly interpreted to the community, the Rev. Lucian L. Lauerman yesterday told delegates at the Institute for Catholic Prison Chaplains.

He spoke at the National Catholic School of Social Service, 2400 Nineteenth Street Northwest, of which he is director and where the sessions are being held under the auspices of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, the National Conference of Catholic Charities and the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

"Religious activities in penal institutions are salutary in themselves," Father Lauerman advised the chaplains from Federal and State institutions, "but they are not the answer to a life of Godliness, virtue and citizenship.

"These religious activities must be supported by families, friends and neighborhood groups who are connected with the inmates," said hte speaker. "It is to them that the chaplain must interpret his work in all its aspects that his mission with the individual wll be completed when the inmate leaves the institution."

Earlier, G. Howland Shaw, of the State Department, urged that every boys' training school worker read Booth Tarkington's "Penrod," which he called "the most profound manual of adolescent psychology" ever writtten. Shaw is a member of the board of trustees of the National Training School for Boys here, the National Jail Association, the Americ anPrison Association, the National Conference on uvenile Agencies, and other welfare groups.

Reed Cozart, warden of the Federal Corection Institution at Texarkana, Tex., spoke on "The Chaplain and Parole," and the Rev. Francis J. Heltsche, chaplain of the Federal Penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., presented his committee's report on the teaching of religion in penal institutions. The Rigt Rev. Msgr. John O'Grady, head of Catholic Charities, presided.

President to Lead Nation-wide 'Rededication' on July 4

The Fourth of July this year will be celebrated as a "grand rededication to liberty," featured by an address by President Roosevelt and by the playing of the "Star Spangled Banner" at the same split second all across the county.

Mayor F. H. La Guardia, director of Civilian Defense, yesterday announced plans for the Nation-wide celebration as President Roosevelt issued a statement call-to "find renewed faith in the blessings which are ours."

Immediately after the President's address, said La Guardia, at all gatherings of Americans — ball parks, seashore, picnics, homes or hospitals, cities or farms—the national anthem will be played.

Singing Set for 4 P. M.

Describing an expected chorus of song across the country, LaGuardia said the exact hour of the playing of the "Star-Spangled Banner" would be 4 p. m., Washington time.

He urged all organizations to arrange their programs to fit into the pattern of this patriotic demonstration.

The idea was conceived a few days ago, he said, by representatives of veterans, fraternal, religious and civic organizations.

The subject of the President's address, which will be nationally broadcast, was not announced.

The text of the President's statement follows:

"The approach of Independence Day this year will kindle in all American hearts an appreciation of the dark days that preceded and followed July 4 1776. Those were the times that tried men's souls even as are these times in another crisis in American life.

These Are Days of Hope, Too

"But these days are also days of hope and as the birthday of American Independence draws near it is altogether fitting that we should and perpetuate thos inalienable rededicate ourselves to defend and rights which found true expression in the immortal Declaration. Those words never had a deeper or more solemn meaning for America than they have in this hour of anxiety and peril.

"The Fourth of July has always been a happy festival, a day of joy and exaltation in which all Americans have caught something of the spirit of liberty which the fathers of the Republic proclaimed to all the world on that midsummer day in Philadelphia in 1776. It has been essentially a home festival.

"I am glad, therefore, to learn that the Office of Civilian Defense is to lead the Nation this year in a grand rededication to liberty on the Fourth of July. I commend this celebration to Americans everywhere to the end that in this solemn commemoration we may find renewed faith in the blessings which are ours because of the struggle and sacrifice, the courage and fortitude and vision of those who made this Nation a reality."

German Newsmen Take an Active Part in All Battles

By International News Service

Berlin.—"Total war" for German journalists means active participation in the fighting.

Holding that the newspaper reading public was entitled to stories by men intimately knowing what soldiers feel like during and after battle, reporters, photographers and newsreel cameramen were organized into special military units called "propaganda companies" at the outbreak of the war and assigned to the front after brief training.

Wearing army or naval uniforms, these newsmen fight with infantry units, in tanks, airplanes, submarines or other warships, handling rifles, machine guns and cannons with the same efficiency as typewriters or cameras. Scores have paid with their lives for their professional ambition.

Thousands of "propaganda company" eyewitness reports have been writtten about practically every event involving Germany's land, sea and air forces. An average of 25 war stories per day is supplied to and published by most of the German dailies.
